CORONATION CEREMONIALS

ANCIENT RITES AND RITUAL TO BE OBSERVED.

Every Detail of the Ceremony Intensely Interesting — Some Curious Legends.

On June 22nd King George V. will be crowned at Westminster Abbey with all the quaint rites and elaborate ceremonial which, with the exception of certain minor alterations, have been religiously observed at the coronation of every sovereign in England since the time of William the Conqueror. The ceremony is more splendid, elaborate, and emblematic than in any other country of Europe. Every day for many weeks past the London newspapers have recorded the progress of the preparations for the supreme event, and announced fresh additions to the round of brilliant functions which will make London—usually sober and absorbed in business—the gayest capital in the world this coming midsummer.

Though the discontinuance of the banquet in Westminster Hall has robbed the coronation of some picturesque feudal customs, the ceremony in the Abbey has been most jealously guarded to every detail of its impressive ritual. From beginning to end it is intensely symbolic; the series of acts presenting the King in his triple capacity of priest, soldier and civil magistrate. Each article of the regalia symbolizes one or other of these functions, all being summed up in the crown itself—"the round and top of sovereignty." The richly jeweled sceptre with the dove recalls the peaceful days of Edward after the expulsion of the Danes, and the gloves are a reminder of his abolition of the Danegeft—a token that the King's hands should be moderate in the taking of taxes.

The coronation ring of pure gold, with a magnificent ruby carved with a St. George's cross, and surrounded by diamonds, typifies the marriage of the Sovereign to his people, and has been poetically called "England's wedding ring." The anointing with oil is traced back to the setting apart of the first King of Israel. The ampulla, the vessel of pure gold in which the consecrated oil is contained, is in the shape of an eagle with outstretched wings, the oil being poured out of its beak. The spoon into which it is poured is of silver, richly gilt, and adorned on the handle with four large pearls. These two articles, it is interesting to note, are supposed to be the sole relics of the original regalia of England demolished by the ruthless Cromwell at the time of the Civil War.

MADE FOR CHARLES II.

The existing emblems were made on the old models for the coronation of Charles II. The curtailed, or sword of Mercy, is the principal one in dignity of the three which are carried unsheathed before the King. It has no point, its blunted blade being a token of mercy. The sword of Justice to the Spirituality is pointed, but somewhat obtuse; and the sword of Justice to the Temporality is sharp pointed. The scabbards of all three are covered with a rich brocaded tissue of cloth and studded with gilt ornaments. The sword of State is a two-hand-be crowned is a close imitation of its ancient consort. On one occasion this royal seat was usurped by a Westminster schoolboy, who secreted himself over night in the Abbey, and scratched on the back of it this brief record of his temerity: "P. Abbott slept in this chair, July, 1800."

The vestments which the King will put on after the ceremony of anointing will consist of: (1) the colobium sindonis, a simple lawn garment; (2) the supertunica or dalmatic, a long coat of cloth of gold, with wide sleeves; (3) the armilla, or stole, a band of cloth of gold three inches wide; and (4) the imperial mantle or pall, resembling a cope, and fastening in front with a morse or clasp. King George will not wear the imperial mantle used by the late King, as was his first intention, having been given by Lord Lancaster, whose great-grandfather, Lord Gwydyr, was formerly Lord Great Chamberlain, the vestment of singular beauty and richness worn by George IV., whose coronation exceeded all others in magnificence and cost no less than $1,215,000. The garment is of the finest cloth of gold, and a beautiful example of the hand-woven industry of the Spitalfields weavers. In to its service are woven the badges of the three kingdoms of England, Scotland and Ireland, and a deep fringe of pure gold threads surrounds the mantle, which looks as fresh as if it had just left the loom.

A WONDERFUL CARPET.

The interior will represent a baronial hall, with its timbered roof supported by wooden pillars and arched beams, and its walls covered with tapestries and arms. The great carpet will stretch from the west door right up to the dais, or "theatre," on which the King will sit enthroned after he has been crowned, is woven in two shades of blue, the foundation being of royal blue, on which are emblems of the noble orders and the initials "G. and M." surmounted by a crown. The design is no less than 42 feet in length. On the "theatre" itself and in the royal boxes the carpet is to have no design, being of a plain royal blue. For the seating of the vast and brilliant company, chairs of Chippendale pattern, upholstered in silk, will be provided throughout the Abbey, which, from the sanctuary to the west door will be one magnificent blaze of scarlet and gold.

On the evening preceding the coronation, the regalia will be conveyed from the Tower to the Jerusalem Chamber of the Abbey, and left in charge of the Dean of Westminster, being closely guarded all through the night by the picturesque Yeomen of the Guard. Early next morning they will be laid on a table in the vestibule, so as to be distributed to those privileged persons who carry them directly before the princes of the blood royal, who precede the King in the procession up the aisle. The vestments will be deposited previously in a special place in the Abbey convenient to the altar.

GREAT INDIAN CHIEF DEAD

BULL HEAD, WAS WAR CHIEF OF THE SARCEES.

Was a Link Between the Old Wild Days and the Present—Big Belly to Succeed.

Absolutely blind, worn, bent, and helpless, but in his prime one of the greatest fighting chiefs which British America has ever produced, there died the other day at the Sarcee Reserve on the banks of the Elbow River, near Calgary, Alberta, Bull Head, chief of the tribe.

A thorough-going pagan who had never professed Christianity, seven feet tall, mighty of muscle, absolutely fearless, and foolhardy of adventure, Bull Head was a figure of the past rather than of the present, one of the few remaining connecting links between the romantic days of the buffalo hunt and Indian wars and the Western Canada of to-day, with its thousands of miles of railways, millions of acres of grain fields, prosperous cities growing like the mushroom almost in a night, its coal mines, smelters, and manufactures.

The day following his death, Bull Head was laid to rest in a seven-foot coffin, with full pagan rites, on the banks of Fish Creek, seven miles from Calgary. He ruled his people with wisdom, and when the pale face finally came he was one of the first to take treaty, smoking the pipe of peace with the white man in 1888.

Bull Head was a war chief, plain and simple. The Sarcee in their palmy days carried the laurel for being the most dangerous fighters of the North-West, "bad medicine" in any conflict. They held the friendship of the Blackfeet, the Bloods, and the Peigans, by reason of their prowess and their undying hatred of the Crees; and they fought the Crees at every opportunity.

KILLED FIVE MEN.

Bull Head was born about 1832, and when a lad of eight years of age he lost the sight of his left eye by the smallpox plague that devastated the North-West Indians early in the forties. He grew to manhood, a mighty man, seven feet tall, and his reputation as a hunter and fighter grew with his stature. Fifty years ago Bull Head's brother was elected chief. Five years later, in a battle with the Crees, the brother of Bull Head was mortally shot, and as he fell he handed his rifle to Bull Head. Thus was he elected chieftain, for the brother gasped out his life as he parted with the weapon. Bull Head, who was fighting from a teepee, shot at and killed a Cree warrior standing near by, then he and his squaw crawled forth and snaked the dead body into the teepee, where they scalped it.

In the Indian roll of honor, the trophies of war collected by a warrior set his standard of efficiency and reputation for bravery. To capture a gun from an enemy was the height of bravery, a sort of Cross of the Legion of Honor; to take the scalp was but a notch below, and then followed lesser grades of bravery for the capture of bows, knives, spears, and tomahawks. The war history is painted clear and simple on the tanned this enlightened day, and Big Belly will probably win.

THE DIET IN RHEUMATISM.

Red Meats Not the Only Article of Food to Be Avoided.

"If there is a disease more than any other that is caused by improper diet, and that can be helped most often by a diet properly adjusted to the capacity of the patient, it is rheumatism, in almost everyone of its forms," writes a physician in the Woman's Home Companion.

There is a popular belief that meat, especially red meat, is the only archfiend that carries into the system uric acid and the other members of the purin group. Tea, coffee, chocolate, cocoa, peas, beans, asparagus, onions, and a few other foods all contain the purin bodies to some extent. Animal soups and malt liquors are also guilty.

"All alcoholic liquors are objectionable, some of course more than others. By many the white meat of chicken or other fowl is considered much less pernicious than red meat, such as beef, mutton, lamb, etc., and by others this is contradicted. Excellent authorities, however, state that whatever may be true theoretically the so-called red meats seem most objectionable practically.

"Increasing the easily digested animal foods, allowing milk, eggs, a small amount of cheese, broiled or roast meats, beef, lamb and chicken in small quantities once a day often brings a happy result. Combine with these farinaceous foods such as rice, farina, tapioca, wheat bread, etc., and suitable vegetables and fruits. Such procedure may give just the relief the overworked machine is craving.

"During acute attacks of rheumatism the diet should consist of milk, buttermilk, milk toast, gruels, etc. This should continue so long as there is any fever. All meats and other objectionable articles mentioned above should be excluded until recovery is assured.

"Alkaline waters are valuable, and excellent results follow the use of generous quantities (at least three pints daily) of any pure soft water taken between meals."

ENGLISH SOCIETY.

Lavish Entertaining and the Boisterous Kitchen Lancers.

It takes a very great personage indeed to carry the principle of being unostentatious into modern entertaining, says the Gentlewoman of London. The almost universal idea nowadays seems to provide gorgeous flowers, the dernier cri in mucus, and any amount of succulent viands as a bribe to smart young men and women of fashion if haply they be kind enough to come and dine or dance.

"Yet even in society there are yet one or two houses where a simple buffet supper is thought to be all sufficient," the writer continues, "and I know of one ducal house where plates of biscuits and sandwiches, with lemonade and claret cup, are considered ample refreshment for the very distinguished guests who are from time to time invited to evening parties in that particular mansion."

"A sudden eruption of balls has brought to the fore some severe protests by chaperons and others on the subject of untaught dancing."

blade being a token of mercy. The sword of Justice to the Spirituality is pointed, but somewhat obtuse; and the sword of Justice to the Temporality is sharp pointed. The scabbards of all three are covered with a rich brocaded tissue of cloth and studded with gilt ornaments. The sword of State is a two-handed weapon, with a scabbard of crimson velvet, decorated with gold plates of the royal badges.

The orb, the symbol of dominion, which is placed in the King's hand immediately before the crowning, is a ball of gold six inches in diameter, surmounted by a fine amethyst, which forms the pedestal of a cross of gold studded with precious stones. The right of holding the orb is the sole prerogative of reigning kings and queens, a custom adopted by the early Saxon sovereigns from the Roman emperors. An amusing story is told of the late Queen Victoria, who, it would seem, was not duly impressed by this great privilege. When Lord John Thynne, who was acting for the Dean of Westminster at her coronation, presented the orb to the Queen, she asked: "What am I to do with it?" "Your Majesty is to carry it, if you please, in your hand." "Am I?" said the Queen, "it is very heavy."

CURIOS LEGENDS.

Legend and mysticism surround more than one object associated with the ancient ceremonial. The coronation ring, according to the "Golden Legend," was given by Edward the Confessor to a beggar who asked alms of him. Not long afterwards two English pilgrims in the Holy Land met an aged man who gave them the very ring, and asked them to return it to the King and tell him that the supposed beggar was none other than St. John the Evangelist. Another quaint mediaeval story recounts how the anointing oil was miraculously delivered to Thomas Becket by the Virgin Mary. The object, however, to which most mystery and interest attach is the coronation stone, or "Stone of Destiny," in the famous King Edward's chair, in which the actual crowning takes place. It was brought to London in 1296 by Edward I., from Scone in Scotland, where the Scottish kings had been crowned upon it for generations. According to the legend, the stone is actually that on which the Patriarch Jacob pillow'd his head at Bethel. It was conveyed to Egypt, from whence it was brought to Spain by Gaethelus, the founder of the Scottish nation, finding its way afterwards to Ireland, and eventually to the church at Scone. On its removal to Westminster Abbey, Edward had the present chair made to receive it, and dedicated it to the Confessor, and since then every English sovereign has been crowned in this historic seat, which is richly draped for the occasion.

A great scandal was caused at the jubilee of Queen Victoria in 1857, owing to the manner in which this priceless piece of furniture was treated by the upholsterers, who smeared it with brown stain and varnish, drove tacks into the ancient "gesso" ornamentation to hold their draperies, and generally showed a lamentable lack of care and respect in handling the old relic.

What to do if He Falls—Broken Legs Generally Hopeless.

When a horse falls in the harness his natural inclination is to get up again. The shock of the fall has excited him more or less, and in his efforts to arise he may further injure himself as well as the harness.

The first action should be to sit on his head, pointing his nose upward with one hand, to keep him from struggling until the traces and all other attachments to the vehicle can be unfastened. If two persons are present this can be done without difficulty.

If a horse breaks his leg the most humane as well as the most sensible action is to shoot him on the spot. It is true that cases are on record where broken legs have been successfully treated by means of suspending the horse in a sling with pulleys, but the experiments in this direction have almost invariably met with failure.

To shoot a suffering animal and kill him instantly is not so simple a matter as it at first appears, says Country Life in America. Many shots are sometimes fired before death results. How and where should a horse be shot?

In the centre of every horse's forehead a little above the line of the eyes is a little swirl something like a cowlick. Three inches above this swirl is the exact spot to lodge the bullet to insure its piercing the brain. The bullet should not be of less than .38 calibre.

For sprains hot or cold bandages are recommended. Fomentations promptly applied sometimes prevent permanent lameness. Spraining of the back sinews is only too common and unless promptly and properly treated results in knuckling and other complications. Blistering, firing and even nerving are resorted to, but it should be borne in mind that these drastic measures are often unnecessarily taken. Rest, turning out where practicable under favorable conditions, and massage often effect a cure.

Not infrequently a horse will pick up a nail. It is unnecessary to say that the first aid is to remove the nail. If suppuration ensue poultice the wound and give the animal rest until well. It may be well to remove the shoe for a time. Great care should be taken that the nail be not broken off flush with the sole and left there to fester. Horses are peculiarly susceptible to tetanus, or lockjaw, and a nail often causes it.

CURIOS LAWSUIT.

Mistake in "The People's Doctor" Cost Author Large Sum.

A curious claim for damages has just been brought before the Correctional Court in Paris, France. M. Tournieux, a cabinetmaker, died from the effects of a prescription which his wife had culled from a book called "The People's Doctor," in which, owing to a misprint, fifteen grams of ammonia were prescribed instead of fifteen drops.

The author of the book, Dr. Georges Migot, was sentenced to three months' imprisonment and fined $20 and the chemist who made up the prescription to one month imprisonment and a fine of the same amount. Mme. Tournieux, the widow, received $200 damages and an annuity of $60, while her children will receive $60 a year each until reaching their majority.

and reputation for bravery. To capture a gun from an enemy was the height of bravery, a sort of Cross of the Legion of Honor; to take the scalp was but a notch below, and then followed lesser grades of bravery for the capture of bows, knives, spears, and tomahawks. The war history is painted clear and simple on the tanned side of two great steer hides, that are on the reserve, south-west of Calgary. In red and black and blue paint the hieroglyphics stare back at the reader and tell the tale of the tall chief's prowess. He fought in thirty battles, he killed five men with his own hand, he stole horses from the Crees, took guns, scalps, five bows, five tomahawks, one spear from his enemies.

BRAVE AS HE WAS WILD.

The crude painted figures show of night attacks, of successful and unsuccessful raids, of bloody battles, and hurried flights. They show Bull Head's brave rescues of friends, and an action that, had he been a British soldier, would have won for him the Victoria Cross. Bull Head, one of his braves, and the squaw of the brave were nearly caught by a large party of Crees. Both the Sarcees and the Crees were mounted, and the horse ridden by the squaw stumbled and fell. Though hard pressed by the Crees Bull Head stopped, dismounted, lifted the squaw to the back of the pony which carried the other brave, and then the Sarcees rode on and escaped.

Bull Head was born a pagan and died one. He stayed by the beliefs of his fathers. When he signed treaty in 1886, he retired to the reserve and kept his tribe in hand, even through the wildest kinds of Indian excitement. His word was law. And he saw his enemies drop off one by one, from disease and violence; he saw his comrades of old battles sicken and pass to the happy hunting grounds, and he stayed on, ruling his tribe. His lone eye grew dim, and finally failed entirely; he still ruled. He sat in his log cabin in the winter, or his tepee in summer, humped up, shriveled, a fearful, rheumy-eyed horror of what had once been the greatest warrior the Sarcees ever boasted. Then finally he died, worn out, simply lay back and his spirit passed on. He assisted in sending many enemies on the long trail before they could remove their moccasins, but he died in bed as peaceful men die.

PRESERVED RESERVE.

So passed Bull Head, chief of the Sarcees. He was dirty, and old, and crippled, but he had been the pride of the tribe. His mental faculties remained with him to the last, and only his stubborn stand against the selling of the reserve has preserved for the tribe that very choice piece of Alberta, ten miles square, on the edge of the foothills, with a stream on each side, and the finest ranges in hundreds of miles. It is one of the most choice parts of the entire Province. Bull Head saved it for the Sarcees. Whether the new chief will do likewise remains to be seen.

Big Belly, fifty years old, is looked upon as the most likely to succeed the deceased chieftain. His one rival, strange to say, is a Cree who was adopted into the tribe when peace was declared, about the time the Indian treaties were signed and reserves were allotted. But the Cree blood is against the rival candidate, even in sandwiches, with lemonade and claret cup, are considered ample refreshment for the very distinguished guests who are from time to time invited to evening parties in that particular mansion.

"A sudden irruption of balls has brought to the fore some severe protests by chaperons and others on the subject of up to date dancing. As usual the controversy centres round that hybrid development of our old friend Lancers yept 'Kitchen.' Really, though, in spite of what chaperons may write to the papers, the fashion of dancing Lancers in a somewhat rollicking spirit is quite a quarter of a century old and preceded the arrival of the modern girl who is not content to do anything except 'at the double.'

"The only difference I can see in the Kitchen Lancers of to-day and the Kitchen Lancers of the middle '80's is that nowadays the young men from time to time lift the young women off their feet, whirl them round a little in midair and deposit them once more on terra firma. This has really rather a pretty effect and certainly need not involve romping.

"Valsing, on the other hand, is absolutely different from what it was in the late Victorian days, and to my mind the present style is decidedly more graceful than the fast deux temps which jumpily and with arm stuck out at right angles was the gentelest mode when the chaperons of '8-day were going out. The effect of a ballroom in motion is nowadays far prettier than it used to be, and a very practical gain brought about by the slow measure and reversing the up to date valse is that there are much fewer collisions and torn clothes than there were ever before."

VACCINATION IS OLD.

Ancients and Savage Races Inoculated For Smallpox.

Hygieia, the circular of the International Hygienic Exhibition, which is to be held in Dresden, Germany, next year, states that vaccination or inoculation, which is commonly regarded as a triumph of modern medical science, has long been practiced by the civilized races of Asia, and even by African and other savages, probably as a result of Asiatic influence. We first meet inoculation for smallpox among the Chinese. Lockhart gives the following quotation from an old Chinese manuscript, which was probably written early in the Eleventh Century: "The ancients possessed the knowledge of inoculation for smallpox. It has come down to us from the reign of Chintung, of the Ling dynasty, and was discovered by a philosopher. When the disease breaks out spontaneously it is very serious and often fatal, but when it is produced by inoculation it is usually mild and does not cause more than one death in ten thousand cases."

In Persia, inoculation is accomplished by scratching the forearm and rubbing into the slight wound after bleeding has ceased the pulverized scurf which falls from a smallpox patient. The Ashante negroes, according to Bowditch, inoculate in seven places on the arms and legs. The Moors practise the same method. The Siamese have the peculiar custom of blowing the scurf into the nose. An interesting collection of material illustrating this subject will be shown at the Dresden exhibition.

NOW THE BRITISH ISLES ROSE WARS BEGUN BY FISTICUFFS

THEORIES BY THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION PRESIDENT.

Scientist Found Marine Shells Over 3,000 Feet Above Sea Level.

The latest scientific theories concerning the world in making, and incidentally the moulding of the British Isles were discussed in the president's address, when the British Association opened its session at Sheffield, which is the scientists' chosen gathering place this year, says Lloyd's Weekly.

The president, the Rev. Professor T. G. Boone, said that in the early Pleistocene times glaciers undoubtedly existed in the mountain districts of the British Isles, and even formed Piedmont ice sheets on the lowlands. There were to be seen deposits which, though to a great extent of glacial origin, differed from those left by land ice in the Alpine regions and in North America, and he particularly noticed the presence of in three instances, over a thousand feet above sea-level.

Not the least perplexing of the glacial phenomena in the British Isles was the distribution of "erratics"—masses of chalk, granite, and bassalt boulders, and other crag lumps, whose course had been very remarkable. Each of the hypotheses which had been proposed to account for these phenomena involved great difficulties.

One, the submergence hypothesis assumed that at the beginning of the glacial epoch our islands stood rather above their present level, and then gradually subsided, in the west to a greater extent than on the east, during the glacial period. But at last the movement was reversed, and they returned to nearly their former position.

BIG LOT OF CHALK.

He found in the thickness of our chalky boulder clay the greatest difficulty in accepting this hypothesis. The boulder clay not infrequently exceeded 100 feet—an enormous amount to have been transported and distributed by floating ice.

The materials also were not much more easily accounted for by this than by the other hypothesis. A continuous supply of well-worn chalk pebbles might indeed be kept from a gradually rising or sinking beach, but it was difficult to see how, until the land had subsided for at least 200 feet, the chalky boulder-clay could be deposited in some of the East Anglican valleys or on the Leicestershire hills.

The instances, also, of the transportation of boulders and smaller stones to higher levels, sometimes large in amount, as in the transference of "brockram" from outcrops near the bed of the Eden Valley to the level of Stainmoor Gap, seem to be too numerous to be readily explained by the uplifting action of shore ice in a subsiding area.

SAND IN ODD SPOTS.

Submergence readily accounted for sands and gravels, but not quite so easily for their occurrence at such very different levels. On the

TRIFLING ACTS THE CAUSE OF GREAT CONFLICTS.

A PUNCH ON THE NOSE LED TO THE KILLING OF TWENTY THOUSAND PEOPLE.

It is curious when one comes to reflect upon the matter, how frequently a comparatively harmless bout of fisticuffs between two individuals has led directly to a great war, in which thousands of lives have been lost, says Pearson's Weekly.

A notable case in point, for example, occurred so late as the year 1891. Two Chilean naval officers, one a Congresionist and the other a Balmacedaist, were discussing politics aboard a vessel of the fleet.

In the heat of the argument one struck the other. Other officers joined in the fray. The sailors, too, took sides, and blood was shed. By nightfall the fleet was in revolt, and the great Chilean war had begun. That single blow cost the lives of more than twenty thousand men.

Inflamed with wine at a village fiesta, a Macedonian peasant named Nicholas Martinovich engaged in a rough-and-tumble fight with a compatriot whom he suspected of being his rival in love, and killed him. Chased by the police, to evade arrest he crossed the frontier into Thessaly, where he quickly gathered round him a rabble rout of desperadoes and started raiding the Turkish villages. This was in March, 1897, and it was the last straw which broke the Sultan's patience. Within a month the Graeco-Turkish war had begun.

GENERAL FOUGHT GENERAL.

The Candian war between the Venetians and the Turks was to have been settled by the rival commanders, who agreed to meet one another in single combat in front of their respective armies. But neither was victorious, for each succeeded in killing the other during a duel of only about ten minutes' duration.

Thereupon the two armies, frantic with rage, rushed at each other, intent upon avenging the deaths of their leaders. The war which followed was one of the most dreadful recorded in history. The Turks lost 120,000 men, the Christians over 30,000.

Curiously enough, this terrible conflict might have been finished much sooner than it actually was, but for another contretemps of a somewhat similar nature. Both sides had become appalled at the awful slaughter, and terms of peace had been agreed upon, but when it came to ratifying the treaty, the Turkish Minister insisted that the Venetian Ambassador should swear "upon his beard and the beard of the Prophet"—the ordinary Moslem form of oath.

To this, however, the ambassador objected, "for," he said, "we Venetians wear no beards."

"Neither, for that matter, do the baboons," retorted the Turk contemptuously, whereupon the Venetian, stung by the insult,

STRUCK HIM IN THE FACE with his mailed fist. The other retaliated in kind, the unsigned

WAGON PAINTING.

MR. MIFFLEBY SEES A GREAT CHANCE FOR IMPROVEMENT.

"I have never yet," said Mr. Miffleby, "heard of a wagon painter attending an art school, but I am convinced that every wagon painter might do this with great advantage to himself and with great benefit to the community, for wagon painting as it is now done is as a rule not an art at all but simply a painting job."

"Wagons are turned out often enough bright and glaring, but as often wholly lacking in grace and beauty. What the painter would learn at the art school would be the science of colors and the science and art of colors complementary."

"Perhaps the commonest combination of colors seen in wagon painting is green and red, a green body and red running part, this being a combination that is proper and pleasing; and next to this comes, no doubt, the combination of red and yellow, a red body and a yellow running part, this being also an agreeable color harmony, but when we depart from these two standard combinations we seem to get lost. We do see some fine wagons that are painted throughout in a solid dark color, with very sparing ornamentation, that are most satisfactorily pleasing to the eye, but when we come to painting wagons in colors other than the standard we seem oftenest to go astray."

"We see many wagons that are in some way distinctive, marked, and this is a clear advantage; such wagons, constantly seen in the streets, help to advertise the business in which they are used, but still we do not see many wagons that are really harmonious in their painting, of themselves pleasing. For instance, we may see a wagon with a body really artistically painted, perhaps with colors widely different, and yet so happily complementary that even the unskilled, though he may not know why, realizes when he sees it that this is good. But this wagon with the pleasing body may have its running part in a color that does not harmonize with it, and so the wagon goes about as a man might in clothes that were good but mismatched. The grand effect is not what it might be."

"Of course one trouble lies in the fact that everybody wants something different. Suppose a man is going to put on the street one or two wagons. He may buy these wagons completed, finished in a color that suits him and have them lettered, and then he puts them in commission, or he may have them painted to suit him and then when he wagons get dingy he sends them to the wagon painter to be repainted."

"The owner may have ideas of his own about the color, or he may defer to the painter, and they talk it over and finally decide that they'll paint the wagon red or maybe yellow or blue or green, and then they go ahead and paint her, perhaps all, body and running parts and all, in the selected color, relying on the lettering for ornamental effect. In this way we come to see some astonishing wagons, in strange tints of the colors selected and wagons in unusual colors, producing

WOME ROLLS ON THEIR HEADS

AND ALSO MODELS OF SHIPS IN FULL SAIL.

There were absurd styles of hairdressing in the time of King George III.

Recent feminine hairdressing, which has come in for no end of criticism and ridicule, is simplicity itself compared with some of the women's previous achievements. An English writer in the Queen records the appearance of high tortoise combs at a recent small function, and intimates that they are coming in again because of the prevalence of the Directoire fashion.

In Queen Anne's time the hair was worn in curls down the back. Caps too were worn; also coifs tied under the chin, a most unbecoming fashion. Then a reaction took place, the dresses became wider in the skirt, and in 1735 they were out of all bounds, and toward the middle of the century they stood off at right angles from the waist. With these hoops the hair was dressed quite flat in order to make the head appear small in comparison with the body, and close fitting caps or coifs were worn.

MEAL PASTE FOR HAIR.

Then the pendulum began to swing the other way, and a few years after structures of horsehair, wool, and hemp began to be worn, with the addition of meal paste and powder, and by 1775 these "heads," as they were termed, became prodigious; in some cases they were three feet high, often surmounted by models of ships in full sail, four wheeled carriages, dolls, spun glass flowers or feather plumes.

Such structures, made up of materials such as meal, etc., were insanitary. Three weeks in summer when the weather was hot was considered quite long enough a period for a "head" to be worn before reconstruction. These doubtless caused great discomfort to the wearer at night; headaches must have been frequent, and the articles known as back scratchers became necessary. So absurd was this abnormal hairdressing that caricaturists made sport of the subject, depicting women with heads so high that stepladders had to be used in dressing them.

Then about 1780 the skirt became smaller and the "head" lower, but

PLUMES WERE WORN.
These were forbidden at Court by Queen Charlotte, but without avail. As the "head" diminished in size the number of plumes increased to three in number, as we see in many old prints of the period, such as those of the old Bath assemblies in 1787, when the leg-horn picture hats and hair in curls were worn on the parade.

Owing to a scarcity of flour at the end of the eighteenth century a tax was imposed by Pitt upon the wearers of hair powder, thus causing the decline of the craze in excessive hairdressing both in men and women. About this time the small hoop disappeared and the skirts became looser and more flowing.

SAND IN ODD SPOTS.

Submergence readily accounted for sands and gravels, but not quite so easily for their occurrence at such very different levels. On the eastern side of England gravelly sands may be found beneath the chalky boulder clay from well below the sea level to three of four hundred feet above it.

While he considered the difficulties in the land ice hypothesis to be the more serious he could not as yet declare the other one to be satisfactorily established.

ICELANDIC JIU JITSU.

Its Secrets Have Been Guarded for a Thousand Years.

"Up to the present time," says a writer in the Strand, "Glima, the ancient pastime and means of personal defence in Iceland, has been jealously guarded from all foreigners."

"Indeed the only occasion when strangers were allowed to witness it during the whole of the last century was when it was displayed before King Christian IX. of Denmark at Thingvellir, and even then only two took part—the present Rev. Sigurður Gunnarsson of Stykkisholm and the Rev. Larus Halldorsson of Reykjavik."

"But times change, and thus today, even in far away Iceland, where news from the outside world is slow to creep in, we have at last recognized that no good purpose is being served by still keeping secret our ancient form of self-defence, the knowledge of which, valuable though it is in everyday life, must necessarily play second fiddle in scientific warfare."

"On that account, therefore, today I feel no qualms in divulging the secrets of this form of self-defence, which has been practised in Iceland since 1100, when my country was a republic. It was not then limited to the platform nor to any special occasion, for throughout the land from the country farm to the Althing (Parliament) it was a daily exercise in which most men took part."

"The essential idea of this Icelandic form of self-defence is to enable the weaker to hold their own with the stronger, and I am not exaggerating when I say that if she will take the trouble to learn some of the tricks and hitches of Glima even a woman possessed of only ordinary strength will be able to defend herself against and overcome an opponent possessed of far greater physical strength."

THE INDIAN'S VISION.

More or less wonderful accounts have from time to time been given of the powers of vision possessed by savage races. During a British anthropological expedition to Torres Straits the visual faculty of the natives was carefully tested, and from these tests the conclusion was reached that the excellence of vision shown by the savages has a psychological origin; that is to say, it arises from knowing what to look for. When the civilized man acquires familiarity with the environment he can see as far as they can. Thus the power of an Indian to tell the sex of a deer at such a distance that distinguishing feature like antlers were invisible was found to rest upon his knowledge of the peculiar gait of the male deer.

"Neither, for that matter, do the baboons," retorted the Turk contemptuously, whereupon the Venetian, stung by the insult, STRUCK HIM IN THE FACE with his mailed fist. The other retaliated in kind, the unsigned treaty was torn to fragments, and hostilities were resumed the very next day.

The beginning of the great uprising of the Sicilians against their French conquerors and masters—commonly known as the "Sicilian Vespers"—was intensely dramatic. It was Easter eve, and Palermo was thronged with merrymakers. A Sicilian bride passed by, leaning on the arm of her husband. A French officer standing near flung at her a taunting remark, and the young, newly-wed husband sprang at him, and felled him with a blow.

The Sicilians were not allowed to wear arms, and the Frenchman carried a sword. This he attempted to draw, as he scrambled to his feet, but a second time the youth's arm shot out, and again the ruffian measured his length on the ground. Then, before anyone could interfere, the insulted husband wrested the deadly weapon from his prostrate foe and ran it through his body.

Wild shouts of exultation from the assembled Sicilians showed how they, at any rate, regarded the deed. Cries were raised of "Death to the French! Kill the insulters of our women!" Seized with a sudden frenzy, the populace rushed wildly through the streets, slaying all of that nation they could find. Altogether about and many times that number on both sides lost their lives in the war subsequently undertaken by France to avenge what she stigmatized as a massacre, but which the Sicilians gloried in as an act of praiseworthy patriotism.

Somewhat similar was the beginning of the terrible series of religious wars which desolated

France in the latter half of the sixteenth century.

Over a thousand Huguenots were assembled in a large barn near a place called Vassy, and were peacefully celebrating their religious rites under the protection of what was known as the "Edict of January." The Duke of Guise, with a large escort, rode by. Some of his followers made game of the worshippers, mimicking them.

The Huguenots got angry, and retaliated with certain opprobrious remarks, and from words the rival parties quickly came to blows.

This was the signal for a general massacre. About sixty Huguenots were slain and above two hundred were wounded. But the rest flew to arms. The rising spread far and wide. And thirty years later Frenchmen were still killing one another on account of this self-same trivial happening.

all, body and running parts and all, in the selected color, relying on the lettering for ornamental effect. In this way we come to see some astonishing wagons, in strange tints of the colors selected and wagons in unusual colors, producing effects that sometimes are not pleasing.

"It has always seemed to me that if I were going into a business in which wagons were required I should consult with an artist as to the wagon painting and I would not rest satisfied until I had found for these wagons a color scheme that was sound and good throughout, one that would make my wagons wherever seen not only distinctive in themselves but objects completely pleasing to the eye, and if I were going into the wagon painting business I should first take a course in an art school. As I said at the outset, I truly believe that any wagon painter who should thus prepare himself would find in the practice of his acquired art a great advantage for himself and prove besides a benefactor to the community."

SIXTY GOLDEN WEDDINGS.

Celebration of a French Festival as Old as the Revolution.

Reims, the centre of the champagne disturbances, has just been celebrating an interesting event, the golden weddings of sixty old couples. We are not told whether they all came from Reims, although the celebration may have been limited to the department.

The fete is as old as the Revolution, when it first seems to have been begun. In the time of the Directory there were two fetes, the fete of the old people and the fete of the golden wedding. This seems to have been a very pretty affair, to judge from the account in the Debats. There was a procession of oxen, with their horns crowned with flowers, followed by children crowned with violets, by young men wreathed with myrtle, and old men with garlands of olives and girls dressed as vestal virgins.

At Paris, in August, 1797, there was a great festival in honor of the old men, who were all given seats at the opera, when "a gracious Hebe crowned their white locks with garlands of roses," and the soldiers presented arms. The idea of the fete was the encouragement of the family circle. The old man, who was a happy grandfather, was feted as an encouragement to the younger generation to follow in his footsteps. The same idea is to be found in our curious observance of the Dunmow Flitch, but we have no fete of the golden wedding corresponding to that held at Reims last week.—The Westminster Review.

THE RABBIT INDUSTRY.

The rabbit industry in Australia is stated to be slowly but surely disappearing. The first export of frozen rabbits was made in 1894, in which year 14,028 rabbits were sent to England. Next year the total was 421,716. In 1900 the total was 5,678,224, and in 1905 10,258,356. Since that year the total has gradually declined till last year it had come down to 2,841,648 rabbits exported. Exporters and agriculturists alike are pleased at this result. The former have all their available freezing plants occupied with meat and butter and cheese, while the latter view the gradual extinction of the rabbit pest with composure.

EDUCATING SINGING BIRDS.

How the Young Learn the Song Peculiar to Their Species.

G. W. Bulman, describing the singing of a yellowhammer, says:—One bird, the pupil, with slightly weaker and less decided song, was answering another, which sang in a clearer and more finished style. There was no mistaking the fact that the first song came from the more accomplished songster, and it was hard to resist the conviction that the other was an imitation.

Several times the instructor gave the complete song. A very, very little bit of bread and no cheese—and the pupil replied also with every note. Three times in succession the teacher gave the song without the final note, and the pupil duly replied with a song one note short.

Mr. Bulman recalls that many years ago the Hon. Daines Barrington made some interesting experiments, upon which he concluded that the song of a bird is no more innate than language is in man. He also notes the case of the oven bird, the young of which apparently learn by imitating the parents while still in the nest. The old birds, it appears, sing a sort of duet together, and the young birds when only partially fledged, are constantly heard in the nest, or oven, practising these duets in the intervals when the parents are absent.

On one occasion Mr. Bulman heard a blackbird crow like a cock. He has also heard a robin imitate the song of a thrush and a skylark, and 'twixt the song of a chaffinch to its own more copious melody.—Knowledge.

BRING LUXURY TO PRISON.

Women's Penitentiary Which Provides Many Comforts.

New South Wales, since the advent of Woman's suffrage, has proceeded upon the principle that nothing is too good for the women—even for those who are being deprived of their liberty. The new penitentiary for women at Long Bay is probably the most up-to-date, comfortable, and even luxurious, place of its kind in the world. It is fitted up with hot and cold baths, with well ventilated cells painted in pleasing colors, electric lighted and stocked with suitable reading matter.

The prisoners are graded according to most advanced ideas, and special privileges are awarded for good behavior. The wardresses are all educated and refined women, and a committee of ladies of Sydney has charge of those who are discharged from prison. Gardening, dressmaking, cooking and washing are taught.

If incarceration is supposed to be an example to wrongdoers, there is undoubtedly a point at which comfort and luxury in prison may be carried too far, says Success Magazine. On the other hand, it is doubtful whether any one is ever injured by kind treatment if intelligently directed. The Australian State has set a good pace in regarding these unfortunate women as in need of treatment rather than of punishment. Long Bay is a moral and physical hospital, not in the strict sense a penitentiary.

THE FESTIVAL OF EMPIRE

Great Crowds Greeted His Majesty and the Queen at the Opening

A despatch from London says: The Festival of Empire, a combination of Industrial Exhibition with pageantry illustrative of the striking periods and episodes in the history of the different parts of the British Empire, was opened at the Crystal Palace on Friday by King George and Queen Mary. It was the first public ceremony of their Majesties since the Court mourning for King Edward was ended, and the first of a long series of functions which promise to make the Coronation season memorable. The weather was beautiful. It was a perfect English Spring day, such as was usually referred to as "Queen's weather" in the time of the late Queen Victoria. Thousands of flags were displayed along the eight miles of the parade, and how the thousands of people who had assembled did cheer his Majesty adding to the steady, oft-repeated call of "The King," "The King." The Monarch bowed gravely in response to these demonstrations, and the Queen smiled joyously. The King was in ordinary dress, and the Queen wore a lilac gown and a hat to match.

CHARCOAL PLANT BURNED.

Five Hundred Men Thrown Out of Employment.

A despatch from Sault St. Marie, Ont., says: In a disastrous fire at the charcoal plant of the Standard Chemical, Iron & Lumber Company, Steelton, on Saturday night the entire retort plant was destroyed and is a total loss. The damage is covered by insurance. It is claimed by one of the men employed that the fire started as a result of an explosion of gas in one of the old mains used before the reconstruction, but the management states that the blaze started in the charcoal loading sheds. The boiler house and by-product plant were saved, but the manufacture of charcoal is suspended indefinitely. Five hundred men are thrown out of employment, besides a number in the woods cutting to supply wood for operation. The plant will be reconstructed upon advice from the head office, Toronto.

The maids of honor are instructed that they must wear toques and not large hats.

Queen Will Not Admit Them to Enclosure at Ascot.

A despatch from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., says: William Carroll, aged sixty-five, who in 1902 escaped from the London Asylum upon the eve of his discharge as fully cured, was convicted of the murder of Jos. Tallyon in a lumber camp near Blind River, at the Assizes here on Thursday afternoon. The jury returned a verdict of guilty, with a recommendation of mercy. Both were employed at Walde Bros' camp, last November, and, according to three witnesses, Carroll entered the shanty at 5:30 o'clock in the evening and struck Tallyon on the head with a double-bitted axe, afterward admitting that he had mistaken Tallyon for another man against whom he had a grudge.

In the court on Thursday Carroll was unconcerned, and did not change his attitude of indifference when the verdict was announced.

The defence entered a plea of insanity, which was not considered by the jury after the evidence of Drs. Bruce Smith and Ryan, who stated that the man was in a condition to realize what he was doing.

The charge of Mr. Justice Britton was slightly against the prisoner.

Dr. Pugsley agreed.

However, as is was, he could not afford to surrender a tax that was bringing in $15,000,000.

RECORD CATTLE PRICE.

The same bidder paid $2,600 for a choice of one of nine cows and selected Billy's Frances Lady Gazelle, a four-year-old cow, bred by Yves Lanoe, of the Isle of Guernsey. Seventy-eight animals were sold for a total of $37,275, which is also said to be a world's record for cattle of this strain. Guernsey fanciers from all sections of the country were present.

A despatch from London, Ont., says: Four people were more or less injured in a runaway which occurred on Thursday night at Tempo, a village just south of Lambeth and twelve miles from London. W. B. ## WHAT OTHER PAPERS SAY.

Editorial Comments Clipped from our Exchanges.

Brantford Expositor.

Mr. Foster can say graceful things when he pleases. His suggestion that those who wish perpetual sunshine should incorporate Sir Wilfrid was an apt tribute. Not being able to return the compliment, the prime minister must have felt somewhat embarrassed.

Victoria (B. C.) Colonist.

The Duke of Connaught says that Scotsmen have played an important part in the history of Canada. After his Royal Highness has served a term in the vice-royalty he will wonder how he came to see things in that light. He will then realize that what he ought to have said was that Canada has played an important part in the history of some Scotsmen.

London Advertiser.

Mr. Foster refusing to go to the Coronation because he resented some remarks by the Conservative, and Sir Wilfrid and Mr. Fielding urging him to go, combined to make a curious spectacle in the House of Commons. Poor Foster! He has been wounded in the house of his friends, and his opponents play the good Samaritan. This is double punishment.

Montreal Gazette.

In a Suffragette wedding at Brighton, England, the bride and groom exchanged rings, and declared that they united themselves on grounds of perfect equality; as comrades and helpmates, whatever the circumstances of life might bring to them. If the lady keeps her pledge thus given, there should be one home in England where a man will amount to something when he is in his own house.

Montreal Herald.

The Montreal-Ottawa Synod has passed a unanimous resolution demanding that the contracting of marriage be made a purely civil act. It has long been evident that as soon as the recognition of ecclesiastical rules in the governance of marriage involved serious hardships to any Canadian of whatever faith there would be prompt agitation for civil marriage; and it is pretty safe to predict that the Presbyterian resolution will not be the last heard of the subject.

Halifax Chronicle.

No tariff arrangement which was ever brought before the Canadian Parliament has been so thoroughly discussed, not even the National Policy of 1879 or the first Fielding tariff of 1897, both of which involved very important changes in the fiscal policy of the Dominion. Thus the reciprocity agreement has been before Parliament for nearly four months, nearly twice as long as the time occupied in considering the resolutions which embodied the scheme of Confederation.

Ottawa Free Press.

Of one thing we can be assured: Laurier will never consent to any policy which will involve the lowering of the nationality of Canada. His whole history tells us that story. He knows what is best for Canada as an independent nation within the Empire; he recognizes all the advantages of British citizenship; but he also has a

CRUSHING A NATION.

The Cambray League and the Fall of the Venetian Republic.

The League of Cambray was the political combination of continental Europe in 1508 against the Venetian republic, which tore from the "Queen of the Adriatic" her resplendent crown and forced to her lips the cup of deepest humiliation.

Back of the league and causing its formation were jealousy, ambition and the desire of crippling the proud people, whose history was the wonder and envy of the world. Too powerful to be overthrown by any single power, it was resolved that Venice should be crushed by the combined forces of all Europe.

During the terrible days of Attila, about A. D. 453, Venice was founded out among the lagoons of the Adriatic, where, it was felt, safety would be found from the ravages of the Hun. The history of the thousand years from the foundation of the city to the year 1508 reads like magic. Rising from the waves, Venice became the wonder of the world. Her navy cut the waters of every known sea. Her merchants were the greatest on earth. Her bank was the financial center of the world. Her palaces, which seemed to be floating upon the blue waters of the Adriatic, were the envy of the kings and queens of the continent. Wealth, fashion, splendor—their abode was Venice.

And so for more than ten centuries did Venice remain the glory of the world, the center of wealth, opulence and power, the home of culture and intelligence, the hearthstone about which sat the finest of the intellectual graces and hospitalities, and such she might have remained but for the League of Cambray, which, with its overwhelming forces, gave her the blow (at Agnade in 1509) from which it was impossible for her to recover.

STORES IN BURMA.

You Can Make Purchases In Them if You Try Hard Enough.

You may walk through the muddy old markets of Rangoon for hours at a time or through the bazaar at Mandalay without any of the salespeople taking the slightest notice of you as a possible purchaser of their wares. The dear little ladies sit cross-legged upon long tables in front of the high cupboards containing their goods. They are placidly smoking or chattering or painting their faces or braiding their hair. They are not attending to business in the least.

If the European is conspicuously dressed or presents a figure which the Burman, with his finely trained sense of humor, considers at all ridiculous then a gay ripple of laughter passes along the stalls, and then indeed the would-be customer is noticed, but otherwise the tourist is an object of no interest whatever.

It requires a great effort to get a Burmese shopwoman (they are nearly all women) to show you her silks, and when at last she has spread her merchandise broadcast upon the table and you are reveling in the illusion that you are living in the middle of a rainbow, with a chance of holding fast to some of its colors, she will ask her price, which is seldom more than a rupee too much, and will stick to it like glue.

She is an indolent lady in many ways, who loves a quiet life, and she has determined that her most comfortable course is not to haggle in the market place. So you may make up your mind that bargaining and persuasion are useless arts to practice in Burma, however valuable they may be elsewhere.—Blackwood's Magazine.

they stand tottering, race to race on a foot wide flagging, the whole delicate problem of their relative rank. The one arrayed in the giddiest garment seems usually to win.

If there is small choice in color and cost between the pink costume of one and the blue costume of the other the one with the straightest hair stands fast and the other walks round, sometimes with grunts and comments sotto voce.

Or, all details seeming equal, they face each other and glare until the one with least nerve wilts, swerves into an adjacent doorway, and the victorious one sweeps by with uplifted chin and exultant petticoats—Irene A. Wright's "Cuba."

Window Leaves.

Six species of plants that possess window leaves have been discovered in South Africa. They are all stemless succulents, and the egg shaped leaves are imbedded in the ground, only the apices remaining visible. The visible part of the leaves is flat or convex on the surface and colorless, so that the light can penetrate it and reach the interior of the leaf below, which is green on the inside. With the exception of the blunt apex no part of the leaf is permeable to the light, being surrounded by the soil in which it is buried.

of the nationality of Canada. His whole history tells us that story. He knows what is best for Canada as an independent nation within the Empire; he recognizes all the advantages of British citizenship; but he also has a firm grasp upon the one important principle, that what the people of Canada want today is a policy which will do the best thing for Canada.

Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

There is no secret made of the fact that the object of those in England and in Canada who are opposing the present reciprocity proposal is to maintain a Chinese tariff wall between Canada and the United States. President Taft was guilty of no breach of courtesy or good manners in saying so and it does seem that those Canadians who are seeking to find an insult to Canadians in his words are putting themselves to a good deal of trouble to find a cause of complaint.

Moncton Transcript.

Our people are not so ignorant of the history of their own country as some of the Conservative orators seem to imagine they are. They know that prior to the old reciprocity treaty of 1854 disloyalty was rampant in the Upper Canadian as well as in some parts of the Maritime Provinces, owing partly to the abolition of British duties upon foreign grain and of the preference of colonial wheat. And they know, too, that it was during the twelve years of peace and prosperity following the adoption of the reciprocity treaty of 1854 that the foundations of the Canadian Confederation were laid and the people drawn closer to the mother-land.

Halifax Chronicle

It is among the oddities of present-day politics that, right after Mr. Borden had been issuing his Macedonian appeals to Tory politicians in the Provinces to come to Ottawa and help him out of the ditch, at the love feast at Ottawa the other night Hon. Geo. E. Foster should receive "a notable ovation when he arose to speak" Why Mr. Foster should be the subject of an "ovation" when the party leader appears to be moving heaven and earth to get new lieutenants, is rather hard for the ordinary person to understand. We doubt even if Mr. Foster himself could grasp it. If he would allow himself to say what he really thinks about it all, it would at least enliven the situation.

Peterboro Examiner.

Canada has done more, in proportion to its population, in providing the machinery of development than any other country. There is much yet to do, and, though the task is great, our increasing capacity for enterprise, and the accompanying development that, in a way, provides the means of progressive enterprise, leads us to look forward to a growth greater than the splendid growth of the past. We are running the race of progress in heats, but one follows the other so closely that each shows a faster pace than the last, which has merely warmed us up for our work. We can repeat what we have done, and in large measure, as our opportunity and resources proportionately increase.

CLEARED HIS CLIENT.

Aaron Burr's Dramatic Accusation In a Murder Trial.

It is undoubtedly true that in former times in all parts of the country it was considered more important and more creditable to save a man's life or liberty than to get a verdict where property only was concerned. These days have passed, however, as far as New York is concerned, and in a lesser degree, possibly, in nearly all the other states, and despite the agitation on the subject they are never likely to return. It is interesting to turn back to the earliest days of the republic and the careers of two lawyers who would have been giants in any age or in any country and who were antagonistic in character and purpose—Alexander Hamilton and Aaron Burr. Both men accepted criminal as well as civil cases. One of the greatest efforts of Hamilton's life was his appearance for one Crosswell, charged with publishing a scandalous libel upon Thomas Jefferson. The court was divided in its verdict, but the prisoner was never punished.

Aaron Burr, that erratic genius who lacked a balance wheel, is said never to have lost a case in which he alone was counsel. It is also of record that he won a case in which by a queer trick of fate his associate counsel was Hamilton. It was a murder case. The actions and manner of the principal witness against the prisoner seemed to Burr exceedingly suspicious, and it is said that both Burr and Hamilton were undecided in their own minds which was the guilty party—the witness or the prisoner. Hamilton's summing up was perfunctory. Burr began to address the jury when it was nearly dark. The witness for the prosecution was leaning against a pillar. His face was pallid and covered with perspiration. He listened intently to the lawyer. Suddenly Burr seized a large candelabrum, and, throwing the light on the face of the witness, shouted, "Behold the murderer, gentlemen!" The witness turned and fled from the courtroom and the prisoner was acquitted.

13 WEEKS IN HOSPITAL

Came Away No Better and Then Two Boxes of Zam-Buk Worked Complete Cure.

Mr. Fred Mason, the well-known upholsterer and mattress manufacturer of St. Andrews, N. B., says:—"I had eczema on my knee, which caused me terrible pain and inconvenience. The sore parts would itch and burn and tingle, and then when rubbed or scratched would become very painful. I tried various remedies, but got no better, so I decided to go to Montreal and take special treatment. I received treatment at the Montreal General Hospital for thirteen weeks, but at the end of that time I was not cured, and almost gave in. A friend advised me to give Zam-Buk a trial, and although I had little hope of it doing me good, I took the advice. Almost as soon as applied Zam-Buk stopped the itching and the irritation. I persevered with the balm and it was soon evident that it did me good. Each day the pain was reduced, the sore spots began to heal and by the time I had used a few boxes of Zam-Buk I was cured.

For eczema, blood-poisoning, piles, ulcers, sores, abscesses, varicose ulcers, bad leg, sore feet, blisters, insect stings, poisoned wounds, cuts, burns, bruises and all skin injuries and diseases, Zam-Buk is without equal. Zam-Buk Soap should also be used for washing all wounds, eczematous

HUGS THE EQUATOR.

Strip Upon Which the Starry White Coffee Flower Blooms.

It is only on the world's waistband that the starry white coffee flower blooms. Only between the fifteenth degrees, north and south of the equator, can the tree be successfully grown and on those altitudes which are between the 3,000 to 5,000 feet mark. Left by itself the plant will grow to a tree twenty-five feet in altitude; but, as man is not usually over two yardsticks high, the bearing shrubs are kept by pruning under a maximum height of ten feet, so that they can be easily handled.

The seeds are thickly sown in the nursery, but as soon as babyhood has passed and the tender sprouts are able to bear a breath of wind or changes of temperature they are transplanted into orchards. They are set pretty far apart so that while young and not yet bearing the soil may be utilized with parallel rows of corn, bananas or plantain. A thrifty shrub grows berries when three years old and continues to bear during twenty years from three to six pounds of beans. Its glossy green leaves remind one of the laurel, and the fragrant, white, five-petaled flowers—the perfume varying in different countries and localities—grow in clusters of from three to ten each in the axils of the branches. Well regulated streams of water run through the orchard to secure lusty growth, but when the berries begin to ripen the Jack Robinson.

A Foxton Ferguson of Oxford university, speaking of the old time ballads, said that as most of the public executions took place in some park or market place, where everybody could be present, the onlookers oftentimes amused themselves by singing ballads giving the entire history of the victim, and this is the reason why so many of the old songs are concerned with the hangman and the gallows tree. Particularly interesting also was his description of the origin of the expression "quicker than you can say Jack Robinson," heard so often in both England and America. It came, he said, from an old ballad about a sailor named Jack Robinson, who returned to Portsmouth, England, to find his old sweetheart married to another. The poor sailor vowed that he would roam the seas forever, which he set out to do hardly before his friends realized what he was doing. They called after him, but he had gone.

Fastening Battery Wires.

There are two ways of doing almost everything, and this is especially true of fastening battery and coil terminal wires. One way is wrong, and the other is to twist the bare end of the wire around the terminal as the hands of the clock move and then tighten up the nut. The reason for this is because the screw thread is right handed; therefore the tendency of the tightening nut will be to twist the wire around the terminal tighter than it was. Should the wire be twisted the other way the nut would tend to untwist it and it would slip under the nut and very likely get a very poor hold.—Boston Herald.

FORGOT HIS ORGAN.

So Filkins Had a Little Talk With the Customs Inspector.

Filkins had just returned from a six months' tour of the continent, and his trunks and boxes were numerous. With considerable anxious care he had prepared his declaration, but when he saw the eagle eyed inspector plunge into his work a wave of fear spread over him. Could he by any possibility have forgotten anything? And if so and it was brought to light would he have to suffer the pain and humiliation of arrest? Rapidly he ran over in his mind the dutiable objects that he remembered having heard that others had brought in—clothing, objects of art, books, bric-a-brac, jewels, musical instruments—ah, his heart stood still—musical instruments—pianos, violins, flutes, organs—

With beating heart he approached the inspector.

"Is there any duty on organs?" he asked in a trembling voice.

"There is," said the inspector, fixing a cold, steely eye upon him.

"Then," said Filkins, "I desire to withdraw my declaration for a moment."

"What for?" demanded the inspector.

"I wish to amend it," said Filkins. "I've had my nose repaired and made over on the other side, and I'd hate to have that organ seized because I'd overlooked it"—Harper's Weekly.

The Scream of Ennui.

A dog howls when he is lonely, a cat wails (the word must be right, for it comes from "caterwaul") because of some combative or amative impulse, but a parrot screams through sheer boredom. I sometimes think it is the only creature that shares with us that secondary curse which followed our ejection from Eden—ennui. And I know that if Noah fed his animals well and if they had plenty of room for exercise the only creatures who rebelled vocally against the dire tedium of voyage and the creatures who made the most noise, bar none, were the two little papings, as our forefathers used to call them.—Atlantic.

Slipper Day in Holland.

There is a curious festival called Slipper day celebrated in Holland. Slipper day in the Netherlands is the one day in the year in which the Dutchwoman claims superiority over her husband. On that day she rules him to her heart's content, and he generally obeys good humoredly enough—that is, unless she is one of those ladies not unknown in Holland or in any other country who aspire to complete rule over their unhappy partners throughout the year.

clusters of from three to ten each in the axils of the branches. Well regulated streams of water run through the orchard to secure lusty growth, but when the berries begin to ripen the water is turned off lest the fruit be too succulent. The twin beans or nutlets ripen within a mass of pulp that looks like a dark red cherry, or in tint and size rather like a cranberry. This pulp, when perfectly ripe, is delicious to the taste, but when dried it is taken off either by hand or, as is usually the case in present day operations in Brazil, by most modern machinery.—St. Louis Republic.

A STARTLING BILL.

Five Thousand Reis For Two Meals In a Brazilian Hotel.

Hotels are few and ill conducted in the Brazilian coast towns, although an occasional good one is met with. Americans who patronize a Brazilian hotel or restaurant for the first time are generally treated to a surprise when the bill is presented. Two young sailors had dinner one day in Pernambuco, and, to their horror, the bill was 5,000 reis.

They nearly fainted and would have fled without attempting to settle; but, there being no chance of escape, they clubbed together all the money they had, about $12, and humbly offered it to the proprietor. Instead of having them thrown into jail, he laughed and explained that their bill in American coin was $250.

He furthermore explained that the basis of Brazilian currency is an imaginary coin called a reis, 1,000 of which make a milreis. Everything is counted in reis, and the figures have a very imposing sound—200 reis for a ride on a street car, 100 reis for having your boots blacked, a million reis for a house, and so on. It is a silly system, but the Brazilians seem to think it perfection.—Exchange.

Stopped the Stealing.

The Rev. Joseph Erskine of Edinburgh at one time in his life lost handkerchief after handkerchief. He found on investigation that it was on Sunday these losses occurred, and accordingly Mrs. Erskine sewed his handkerchief in the tall pocket of his coat.

"Noo," said she—"noo lat us see what will happen."

Mr. Erskine, with the sewed in handkerchief, passed down the aisle of the church that morning, as usual, to ascend to the pulpit, but as he sailed by the amen corner he felt a gentle tug behind, a delicate nibble among his coattails. Thereupon he turned on the disappointed old woman in the corner and said, with a triumphant smile:

"No' the day, honest wuman; no' the day."

OPERATION HER ONLY CHANCE

Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lindsay, Ont.—"I think it is no more than right for me to thank Mrs. Lydia E. Pinkham for what her kind advice and

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. When I wrote to her some time ago I was a very sick woman, suffering from female troubles. I had inflammation of the female organs, and could not stand or walk any distance. At last I was confined to my bed, and the doctor said I would have to go through an operation, but this I refused to do. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now, after using three bottles of it, I feel like a new woman. I most heartily recommend this medicine to all women who suffer with female troubles. I have also taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills and think they are fine."—Mrs. FRANK EMSLEY, Lindsay, Ontario.

We cannot understand why women will take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, without first trying Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion, and nervous prostration.

Next the Apaches dragged the safe up the side of a mountain and tumbled it over a precipice 200 feet high. They expected, of course, to see it burst open but the only damage was a slight injury to one of the wheels. The safe was left soaking in the river for three or four days, and great was the Indians' disappointment at finding them selves still baffled.

Then they tried gunpowder; but knowing nothing of the art of blasting, they brought about an explosion that burned half a dozen warriors and left the safe none the worse.

The Indians worked over that safe off and on for a month or more, but failed to get at the inside. Finally, in disgust, they left it in a deep ravine.

Fourteen months later, when peace came, the army accidentally found the safe. It was lying in the bed of a creek with a great pile of driftwood around it. It was a sad looking safe, but when opened showed its contents intact.—Harper's Weekly.

Making the Cormorants Work.
In Marseilles the salary of a mother-in-law hired to fill the position for a few hours is quoted at 1s. 6d. It was a case of separation of the girl's parents. Custom decreed that the mother-in-law must be present at the marriage ceremony, so the obliging matron agreed to go to give her consent on condition that a carriage be sent for her, and if not, said she, she would stay at home. The hour for the wedding came, but the carriage did not, so the mamma stayed at home. The bridegroom in desperation when she did not appear ran out into the street and hunted up a promising looking woman, who agreed to come and act mother for the sum named. So she gave consent and blessing to the daughter whom she had never seen in her life before.—Buffalo Express.

The Nile or the Sky?

The barge sped like an arrow over the water, leaving behind it a silver wake that soon was effaced. A few frothy bubbles breaking on the surface alone testified to the passage of the craft, already out of sight. The river banks, yellow and salmon colored, unrolled rapidly like papyrus bands between the double azure of the heavens and the water; these so alike in tone that the thin tongue of earth which separated them seemed a causeway built across an immense lake and made it difficult to decide whether the Nile reflected the sky or the sky reflected the Nile.—"One of Cleopatra's

BAFFLED THE INDIANS.

An Old Army Paymaster's Safe That Was Apache Proof.

Years ago in the west, when the government sent out safes for the use of its army paymasters in remote districts, it was the custom for the paymaster in cavalry service to ride in an ambulance with the safe, escorted by a guard of six mounted men.

On one occasion such a guard was attacked by a large force of Apache Indians. Two men were killed, and the Indians captured the ambulance with the safe. This safe contained about $8,000 in greenbacks, and it weighed some 400 pounds and had a combination lock.

Now, the Indians in question had never seen a safe at close quarters until this one happened along, but they knew that it contained money; also they wanted that money.

They first pounded off the knob with stones, under the impression that the door could then be pried open. Their attempt was, of course, a failure. The next step was to try their tomahawks on the chilled steel in the hope that a hole might be cut in it. This means, too, proved of no avail, so they determined to try fire. Accordingly, they gave the safe a three hour roasting. Luckily for the government, it was fireproof. They threw big rocks upon it while it was hot, but they were as far from the money as ever.

Next the Apaches dragged the safe up the side of a mountain and tumbled it over a precipice 200 feet high. They expected, of course, to see it burst open but the only damage was a slight injury to one of the wheels. The safe was left soaking in the river for three or four days, and great was the Indians' disappointment at finding them selves still baffled.

Then they tried gunpowder; but knowing nothing of the art of blasting, they brought about an explosion that burned half a dozen warriors and left the safe none the worse.

The Indians worked over that safe off and on for a month or more, but failed to get at the inside. Finally, in disgust, they left it in a deep ravine.

Fourteen months later, when peace came, the army accidentally found the safe. It was lying in the bed of a creek with a great pile of driftwood around it. It was a sad looking safe, but when opened showed its contents intact.—Harper's Weekly.

Lottery Chances.

M. Henri Poincaré, the mathematician, told us a few years ago that if every one who buys a lottery ticket knew how little chance there was of any one winning a prize there could be no successful lottery. The chance of each was about equal to the danger of being killed in a railway accident.—London Truth.

THE STRENGTH OF A CHAIN

Is that of its Weakest Link. Father Morrissey's No. 10 Forges it Anew.

The chain of the physical system is only as strong as its weakest link. When that link breaks, the chain breaks, and serious illness followed by death often results. The weak link with many people is the throat and lungs. In fact, statistics show that over twenty-five per cent of all deaths can be directly traced to diseases of these most important respiratory organs. Weakness here is very dangerous.

During his long and successful practice, Father Morrissey, the learned priest-physician, was often called upon to treat bronchial and pulmonary affections. He soon found that it was not enough to make temporary repairs on the "link," but that it had to be forged anew, in order permanently to strengthen the chain.

After much study, he succeeded in devising a prescription that would secure this result, by not only giving prompt relief but also by rebuilding and strengthening the delicate cells and membranes of the throat and lungs.

This prescription, Father Morrissey's Lung Tonic, or No. 10, has cured thousands. It is absolutely free from any dangerous drug, being compounded from Nature's own roots, herbs and balsams.

No. 10 stops the cough, relieves the soreness and strengthens and fortifies the system against future attacks. Even in the early stages of consumption it has proved helpful, but the wise plan is to take it in time, and avoid serious disease.

In our climate it is well to have a reliable and tested remedy like No. 10 always on hand. Take it at the first appearance of a cold, and keep the chain of life strong and capable of resistance.

Triai size 25c, per bottle. Regular size 50c. At your druggist's or from Father Morrissey Medicine Co., Ltd., Montreal, Que.

AT LAST, A CURE FOR RHEUMATISM

"Fruit-a-tives Cured Me" Says Mrs. Baxter.

"I was a helpless cripple from Rheumatism for nearly a year. All down the right side, the pain was dreadful and I could not move for the agony. I was treated by two physicians without help.

I saw "Fruit-a-tives" advertised in "The Telegram" and decided to try them. After I had taken one box, I was much better.

When I had taken three boxes, I could use my arm and the pain was almost gone.

After taking five boxes, I was entirely well again. The cure of my case by "Fruit-a-tives" was indeed splendid because all the doctors failed to even relieve me. "Fruit-a-tives" cured me.

MRS. LIZZIE BAXTER.

4 HOME PLACE, TORONTO, Dec. 15, '09.

In hundreds of other cases, "Fruit-a-tives" has given exactly the same satisfactory results because "Fruit-a-tives" is the greatest blood purifying medicine in the world. "Fruit-a-tives" the famous fruit medicine regulates kidneys, liver, bowels and skin, and prevents the accumulation of uric acid, which is the prime cause of Rheumatism.

"Fruit-a-tives" will positively cure every case of Rheumatism, when taken according to directions. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At all dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

THE STEAM ARM.

O wonders sure will never cease,
While works of art do so increase;
No matter whether in war or in peace
Men can do whatever they please.

A curious tale I will unfold
To all of you, as I was told,
About a soldier, stout and bold,
Whose wife, 'twas said, was an arrant [cold.

At Waterloo he lost an arm,
Which gave him pain and great alarm,
But he soon got well, and grew quite calm,
For a shilling a day was a sort of balm.

The story goes, on every night,
His wife would bang him left and right,
So he determined, out of spite,
To have an arm, cost what it might.

He went at once, strange as it may seem,
To have one made to work by steam;
For a ray of hope began to gleam
That force of arms would gain her esteem.

The arm was finished and fixed unto
His stump of shoulder neat and true,
You'd have thought it there by nature grew
For it stuck to its place as tight as glue.

He started home, knocked at the door,
His wife her abuse began to pour;
He turned a small peg, and before
He'd time to turn she fell on the floor.

With Policemen soon his room was filled,
But every one he nearly killed,
For the soldier's arm had been so drilled
That once in action, could'n't be stilled.

They took him at length before the Mayor,
His arm kept moving all the while there,
The Mayor cried, shake your fist if you dare
And the steam arm knocked him out of [his chair.

This raised in court a bit of a clamor,
His arm kept going like an auctioneer's [hammer;
It fell in weight like a paver's rammer,
And many in fear began to stammer.

He was locked in a cell for doing harm,
To satisfy those who had still a quan,
When all at once they heard an alarm
Down fell the walls, and out peeped the [arm.

He made his escape and reached the door,
And knocked by steam raps half a box,
But his arm in power grew more and more
Brick, mortar and wood, soon strew the [floor.

With eagerness he stepped each stair,
Peeped into the room, his wife was there
"O come to my arms, she said, my dear!"
His steam arm smashed the crockeryware

He left his house at length outright,
And he wanders now just like a sprite,
For he can't get sleep, either by day or [night,
And his arm keeps moving with a two [horse might.

CROP BULLETIN.

A bulletin of the Census Office issued recently makes the following report on the crops and live stock of Canada.

The seeding and growing season for the whole of Canada has opened late this year, and the month of April was marked by hard frosts. But May has been favorable to cultivation of the land, and the rainfall has been sufficient for healthy vegetation.

Fall wheat, which is grown chiefly in Ontario and Alberta, showed an average condition of 82 per cent at the end of April, being 89 per cent in Alberta and 81 per cent in Ontario. In Ontario however the April frosts were destructive in some regions; and from 12 to 34 per cent of the area sown has been reported as winter-killed. The central counties, north of lake Ontario, suffered worst, the average loss as reported being 34 per cent. In the western counties 57 per cent of the area in crop has been destroyed. In the southern counties, north of lake Erie, the loss is 10 per cent; in the northern counties and districts 12.6 per cent; and in the eastern counties, between the St. Lawrence and Ottawa rivers, 15 per cent. For the whole of Canada the area winter-killed is reported to be 21 per cent, and the ner

Cedron Seed Plant.

In Central America many natives are gathering the seeds of this plant, Cedron Seed, a rare medicine that has valuable curative powers. But few drug stores carry this seed, owing to the high cost of the article.

This country is a large consumer of this costly seed because it enters into the famous catarrh remedy, Peruna, sold the world over.

PUZZLED THE LINGUIST.

A Hindu Dialect Story That Appeared In the London Times.

John Walter of the London Times once found a unique way out of a difficulty brought about by a strike of compositors and pressmen. At the critical moment, it appears, the "copy" fell short by half a column. There was none at hand ready to utilize, and time pressed. It was really an inspiration that came to Walter. He laid hold of a column of "pi" (spilled type) that has been reset in a jumbled mass to facilitate distribution back into the type cases) and prepared it in the most expeditious way, so that it might pass muster for an article in a foreign tongue. He ran it in with a few lines of introduction, stating that this incomprehensible mass was a paper in some Hindustani dialect, translation of which would follow in due course. No translation, it is superfluous to say, ever appeared.

Many years later, long after Walter had forgotten this incident, he was visiting in Cheshire, where he was introduced to a most learned pundit and oriental scholar. "Ah," said this gentleman, "I have long and ardently wished to solve a problem that has puzzled me for years." And he drew from his pocket a tattered clipping of Walter's "pi," indicating to the embarrassed proprietor of the Times that the alleged Hindustani article had baffled his most strenuous and assiduous efforts to decipher, although he had tried every known dialect of the language. There was nothing for Walter to do but flee, which he did without ceremony.

A Tough Meal.

Tastes differ strangely from age to age. Flamingoes' tongues are said to have been an epicurean luxury in Roman days, but the authors of "Unexplored Spain," who experimented with them, found no pleasure in the meal. "The tongue," they say, "is a thick fleshy organ, filling the whole cavity of the mandibles, and furnished with a series of flexible, bony spikes or hooks nearly half an inch long and curving inward. We found them quite unpalatable—tough as India rubber. Even our dogs refused to eat the delicacy."

Missed the Oil Cup.

The motorist emerged from beneath the car and struggled for breath. His helpful friend, holding the oil can, leaned upon him.

Eric, who loss is 10 per cent, in the northern counties and districts 12.6 per cent; and in the eastern counties, between the St. Lawrence and Ottawa rivers, 15 per cent. For the whole of Canada the area winter-killed is reported to be 21 per cent, and the per cent condition of the growing crop is 82.

About 12½ per cent of the clover was heaved out by the spring frosts, and the average condition of hay and clover at the end of April was 89 per cent. Alberta shows better than any other part of Canada, its average being 94½ per cent. Nova Scotia comes next, with 93.75; and in Quebec, British Columbia and Saskatchewan the condition is over 90. In Ontario it is 86 and in Manitoba 85 per cent.

The percentage of total seeding completed at the end of April was 21.32 in Quebec, 44 in Ontario, 47 in Manitoba, 47.30 in Saskatchewan, 66.81 in Alberta and 76.90 in British Columbia. Manitoba and Saskatchewan had 70 per cent of the proposed area of spring wheat sown at the end of April, and Alberta and British Columbia 80 per cent. The Maritime Provinces had scarcely made a beginning of seeding operations at the end of April, and in Quebec barely one-fourth of the spring wheat, oats and barley were sown. In Ontario 51 per cent of the spring wheat was in the ground, 44 per cent of the oats and 42½ per cent of the barley.

The report on the condition of live stock is good for all the Provinces, being 95 for horses, 92.43 for milch cows, 90.56 for other cattle, 93.32 for sheep and 94.51 for swine. Alberta is below 90 for horses, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta for milch cows, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia for other cattle, and Alberta and British Columbia for sheep; but generally the condition ranges about 90 per cent.

NERVOUS DISEASES IN THE SPRING

Can be Removed by Toning Up the Blood, Thus Strengthening the Nerves

Nervous diseases are more common and more serious in the spring than at any other time of the year. This is the opinion of the best medical authorities after long observation. Vital changes in the system after long winter months may cause much more than "spring weakness," and the familiar weariness and aches. Official records prove that in April and May neuralgia, St. Vitus dance, epilepsy and various forms of nerve disturbances are at their worst, especially among those who have not reached middle age.

The antiquated custom of taking purgatives in the spring is useless, for the system really needs strengthening, while purgatives make you weaker. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have a special action on the blood and nerves, for they give strength and have cured not only many forms of nervous disorders, but also other spring troubles, such as headaches, weakness in the limbs, loss of appetite, trembling of the hands, as well as unsightly pimples and skin troubles. They do this because they actually make new, rich, red blood, which means a return to perfect health.

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

PRACTISING TO COURTSY.

The Teachers of Court Department are Kept Busy.

Teachers of deportment in luxuriant West End London salons are busy putting pretty debutantes "through their paces" for the coming courts. Rehearsals are not as exacting as in Queen Victoria's time, for the Georgian debutante will not have to face quite so formidable an ordeal. She will curtsey once to the King and once to the Queen, then retire as gracefully as possible to the supper room. However, even this comparatively simple performance must be carried out to perfection.

The minimum cost of a debutante's outfit is $150, but as a rule more than $1,000 is expended, the heaviest items in the account being $500 for the gown and $150 for the cloak. An American bride has been known to spend as much as $8,500 on her court outfit, the gown costing $7,000.

The courts will be held, as usual, in the handsomest room in Buckingham Palace, the great ball room, which has recently been magnificently decorated and is now every bit as imposing as the celebrated Hall of Mirrors at Versailles. There are four enormous new entrances, each more than twenty-seven feet high, and with four swinging doors composed of mirrors, which reflect the glittering scene. So wide are these doors that twelve persons can enter abreast.

FORTUNE FAVORS THE BRAVE; OR, A LOOK INTO THE PAST

Dorothy was disappointed beyond expression, and Mrs. Darnley was annoyed. It hurt her to think that any woman should have such power over her son, and that he should have gone without a word or sign to her; a sense of vexation, too, mingled in with her satisfaction in that she was effectually parted from that designing girl, vexation new to her proud nature in more senses than one.

It was from Raines that Nancy learned of Darnley's departure, and, though her face made no sign, she felt a wave of relief pass through her; it would not be so difficult to bear now he was gone, she told herself. The torture of seeing him day after day, reading his utter contempt and disgust, would have been too great.

The maid imparted the news very cheerily; but her sharp eyes were not to be deceived by any acting, however good. She had grown very fond of Nancy, and, woman-like, she had conjured up a romance for the girl in which Derrick Darnley took a prominent part.

They would make a handsome pair, she had determined over and over again, as she had watched Nancy walk across the grass, the sun glinting her russet curls, the sky above not bluer than her eyes. Any one could see Miss Hamilton was a lady born, and she was as sweet as she was beautiful. There might be a double wedding, for all they knew, when the Earl of Merefield led Miss Dorothy to the altar.

But all these dreams vanished when Baines beheld Nancy's white face, and told her that Mr. Darnley had gone away; gone for good he had, so Foster said. Something had happened, and when Baines knew what that something was she was thunderstruck with horror.

"It ain't natural!" she cried, to her fellow servants; "and she'll break her heart, see if she don't." "If it ain't already broke," observed old Foster, shrewdly. "Don't Miss Dorothy take on, too; I never see two such pretty faces so changed. Lord 'a' mercy on us, what does a nice young woman like that want a-marryin' that beast; like enough he'll kick her as he did poor Zoo."

And at this notion Baines turned pale with horror.

"I wish I might go with her when she goes," she thought to herself; but she said nothing to either her young mistress, who had grown strangely quiet or constrained, or to Nancy, when she went in to help the girl dress for dinner. It was Baines, and Baines alone, who noticed how wan and weary Miss Hamilton was becoming. She knew just how much value to put on the red patches which decorated the fair cheeks; she knew that it was no amount of heat which brought the dark circles round those blue eyes. Her heart beat in sympathy with the girl's though she said no-

remained in the same state of disappointed pain—a pain that was not lessened by the triumphant expression on her Aunt Priscilla's and her Aunt Anne's respective faces; they said as plainly as though the words were written there:

"This comes of quixotic kindness! Ah! we always knew that girl would turn out badly."

And to Dorothy, in her simple truth, it seemed as if she must, against all love and loyalty, agree with this, for she felt that Nancy must be sacrificing her very soul to gain this man's money.

Mrs. Darnley watched the rift widen between these two girls with intense satisfaction.

"Once married, Dorothy will have done with her for ever."

And Nancy, alone in her room, the night before her wedding morn, with none but the stars to shine in on her solitude, spread her arms and bowed her head upon them.

"Only give me strength to bear it all!" was her prayer. "Oh, Father, above, do not Thou desert me utterly."

CHAPTER XV.

It must not be imagined that Nancy had calmly accepted Crawshaw's statement concerning her uncle as complete and final. She had received a letter from Henry Chaplin, as we know, giving here a rather incoherent account of his crime, and imploring her, by everything she held sacred, to save him from dishonor and open shame; but when the first sharpness of the blow had worked off, Nancy set about procuring further information from her uncle.

She found it very hard in her own mind to reconcile the thought of Henry Chaplin with so mean and base an act; and thought she could not deny the authenticity of his letter, yet she could not crush down a strange suspicion and doubt that Crawshaw was deceiving her somehow in this matter.

When the first week of her most miserable and comfortless engagement had passed, Nancy wrote to Dr. Grantley.

She dwelt but briefly on her present position, but asked him many questions about her uncle—always, of course, repressing any mention of his crime—and ended by saying how glad she would be if Dr. Grantley would prevail on Henry Chaplin to come down to Ripstone village and see her, if only for a few moments.

The answer to this letter arrived the night preceding her marriage.

Dr. Grantley had been abroad, hence the long silence.

Her old friend wrote his congratulations on her good fortune; but they did not sound altogether sincere, for he was in reality astounded at the news, knowing, as he did, how the girl had loathed and detested her future husband when he

it is the very hardest of all that I must be misjudged, that I must watch them growing cold and hard toward me, and yet never move my lips to tell them my story. Perhaps if he were to know, he would be less cruel in his anger. Derry! oh, Derry! my dear heart, my lost love!"

The rain fell steadily outside, weeping, as it were, for her wrecked youth and gladness. The cool, damp night air stole in through the open window to greet her with a chilly touch, the clock from the tower chimed the quarters and the hours, and she still sat on, crouched in her chair, battling with her grief with all her strength, and longing with a dumb, great longing that it might end even by death, she cared not how, so that she might be free.

* * * * *

The morning broke radiant after the torrents of rain that had fallen in the night.

Ripstone Hall and Ripstone village were awake early, and busy preparations commenced with an eagerness that bespoke excitement.

And is not a wedding always an excitement, come when it may? Of course, there would have been considerably more of this had the bride been Miss Dorothy, their golden-haired mistress and idol; but as it was, there was a good briskness prevailing, and every one had a kind wish for Nancy, who had endeared herself to all with her quick sympathy and generosity.

Sir Humphrey and Dorothy were determined on doing everything as well as it could be done, despite the very disagreeable remarks passed on their folly by Lady Merefield, and the sneers with which Mrs. Darnley watched the proceedings.

"It is scandalous," the Countess of Merefield declared; "there could not be more fuss or expense if Dorothy herself was going to be married; it is passing all comprehension! What claim has this girl upon them that they should make fools of themselves about her in this way? She is a very lucky person, and it would have been more becoming altogether had she gone to church simply, without all this show and noise."

Beauvalon, Alta., May 1 (Special).—Women who are nervous, run down and suffering from Rheumatism, cannot fail to be interested in the case of Miss Gertrude E. Reyome of this place. She was exactly in that condition. Today she is as she puts it herself "a new person." Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her. Here is her statement given for publication:

The subject of clothes is more than ever interesting both men and women in London, for all want to be fully up to date in style during coronation year.

Dressy men are exercised over the question of whether the frock coat or the morning coat is the correct wear. Tailors decree in favor of the morning coat because, like the harem skirt, the frock needs uncommon slimness of figure to be worn with effect. The frock coat has been steadily losing favor in the last few years, and is worn only at weddings and on other most formal occasions.

A GOOD MEDICINE FOR THE BABY

Baby's Own Tablets is the one medicine that can be given little ones with the firm knowledge that nothing but good will result. The Tablets are sold under the guarantee of a government analyst to contain no opiate nor any other drug which will harm the youngest child—they cannot possibly do harm; they always do good, and once a mother has used them she will never again give her little ones castor oil or the "soothing" stuffs which simply drug baby into temporary relief and in the end do harm. Mrs. Philias Paradis, Frampton, Que., writes: "Send me two more boxes of Baby's Own Tablets. I have used them for constipation and have always found them very good. My baby is certainly progressing under the Tablets." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

DISINTERESTED

Jack—"I have a chance to marry a poor girl whom I love, or a rich woman whom I do not love. What would you advise?"

George—"Love is the salt of life; my friend Without it all else is naught. Love—pure joy—makes poverty wealth, pain a joy, earth a paradise."

Jack—"Enough! I will marry the girl whom I love."

George—"Bravely spoken! By the way, would you ever mind introducing me to the rich woman whom you do not love?"

Ticed how wan and weary Miss Hamilton was becoming. She knew just how much value to put on the red patches which decorated the fair young cheeks; she knew that it was no amount of heat which brought the dark circles round those blue eyes. Her heart beat in sympathy with the girl's, though she said nothing; she noticed the quick, hungry look that came in Nancy's face when Dorothy's voice sounded outside or her step came on the stairs—Dorothy, who used to rush in every other moment laughing and romping, but who never came near the room now, and, indeed, rarely addressed Nancy at all.

For Dorothy was simply overwhelmed with grief and disappointment. She had to listen, day after day, to bitter remarks about Nancy Hamilton, and hear her summed up as mercenary, heartless and ungrateful, knowing all the while she could not contradict the slander.

"I tried to make her happy, and I failed," she used to say to herself, "she wants more than we can give her—with that man she will have every luxury possible—that is why she is going. If she had not told me herself it was her own wish, I would never have believed it; and even now she is longing to be gone. She never comes near me. Oh! Nancy! I loved you so dearly!"

Well was it for Nancy she was spared these laments, or her burden would have been still heavier! It was a horrible time—a living night mare! She shrank from mingling with the flow of guests, yet she was compelled to do so; and all the time she was conscious of Dorothy's changed face. Sir Humphrey's astonishment and undisguised regret, Mrs. Darnley's contempt, and the curiosity bestowed on her by all the rest. Awful as the future seemed, the present was to her more terrible, and she grew to long for the moment when she could escape all this, even though in that escape she found herself Crawford's wife.

The marriage was to be immediately—the first week in September and Dorothy had one interview alone with Nancy when this was announced.

"I have written and asked Madam Celeste to come to us here, Nancy," she said, gently. "She will take the whole of your trou-sseau in hand. No, no, please—as Nancy's pale lips opened to speak

"please do not deny me this one pleasure I entreat you, for the sake of the love and friendship that once existed between us, to allow me to act toward you as I should act to a sister."

Nancy's eyes were blinded by tears. She bent and kissed Dorothy's hand.

"Do as you will, dear. I accept," she said, in choked, miserable tones.

Dorothy grasped her hands.

"Nancy," she began, eagerly. Was the moment come when Nancy would throw aside this horrible mystery that hung over her actions? She waited almost breathlessly, but the other girl made no sign, and, with a deep-drawn sigh, Dorothy moved to the door and went out.

If she could but have heard the moan that broke from Nancy's overcharged heart, and seen her arms outstretched in an abandonment of tenderness, she would have been happier than she had been ever since that memorable night; but seeing, knowing nothing of this, she Grantley had been abroad, hence the long silence.

Her old friend wrote his congratulations on her good fortune; but they did not sound altogether sincere, for he was in reality astounded at the news, knowing, as he did, how the girl had loathed and detested her future husband when he had been simple Thomas Moss, of the timber yard. Then he went on to say that, immediately on receipt of Nancy's letter, he had gone in search of her uncle, only to find, greatly to his astonishment, that the little grocer's shop was empty, and that the Chaplin family had gone away, some said to America, some to Australia; but no one quite knew where.

"The neighbors hint at some pecuniary trouble which lately befall your uncle," Dr. Grantley wrote, "and are of opinion that he was compelled to go away. Of course, my dear child, you may rely on my doing all in my power to discover his whereabouts, however difficult a task it may prove to be. I only regret that I was not at home when this crisis, whatever it was, came upon him, poor man. I had a strong feeling of friendship for Henry Chaplin, and I pitied him from the bottom of my heart; he was an honest and honorable gentleman, and must ever remain so, despite a hundred grocer's shops."

And with a few more kind and affectionate words to herself, the letter ended.

Nancy's heart beat with a sudden hurriedness as she read that simple testimony to her uncle's truth and honor, but the faint gleam of pleasure did not last long.

Her uncle was gone, flown to distant lands, without a word or sign. What further proof of his guilt was necessary?

To Nancy this news dropped the last stone to the barrier that stood irrevocably between her and happiness; it was enough, and her final hope, faint and feeble though it had been, was killed entirely.

The night before her marriage! What a dark, close, sombre night it was!

One by one the glittering stars faded out of the gloomy, clouded sky, and the sound of patter rain on the leaves outside reached the girl's ears as she sat keeping her lonely, miserable vigil until morning broke. She was very weary, but sleep was impossible to her. Her hot, sad eyes went round the dainty room. How dear, how inexplicably dear, it looked to her! Here had been spent the happiest moments of her young life, such moments as she could not understand now, they seemed so far away, as if they had belonged to some other creature—not to her, poor, helpless, hopeless Nancy.

She was tired of thinking, tired of dwelling on the past—the future she would not even let enter her thoughts; she shivered with dread and fear at the bare mention of the word.

She was such a poor, young creature to fight against so many and hideous difficulties.

"Oh, if I could only open my heart to her!" she cried, as Dorothy crept into her mind; "if I might only tell her all and hold her clasped in my arms, it would be almost happiness. She would know then I am not the worldly, mercenary, ungrateful creature she must think me now. She would sympathize with me, and heal my aching wounds with her sweet love;

Is not Miss Reyome's condition an exact description of nine-tenths of the ailing women of Canada? The doctor did not understand her case. It was simple enough. It was Kidney Trouble. And Kidney Disease is the one great cause of women's troubles. Dodd's Kidney Pills always cure it.

MAN OF MODERATE MEANS.

His Wardrobe May be Meagre but He Has Bright Hopes.

"It's funny," said the man of moderate means, "how things can come around. We always think we are going to have things, but we never do; something always happens to prevent."

"You take my own case, for instance. I'm wearing a summer suit that I've been wearing continuously the year around for three years. It's a dark suit, appropriate in color for any season, and that's good, and it's in good condition. A little shiny, perhaps, but it's not a bad looking suit; in fact, it's pretty good, and I'm not ashamed of it anywhere."

"How does it come to look well after three years' wear? Because I take care of it very carefully. I take it off when I get home at night and put on an old suit; I don't sit around in my good suit and get it all wrinkled and bulged out of shape. I hang it up carefully to help keep its shape. I brush it and keep it clean, and it really looks well. I am free to say, though, that I would like a new fresh suit; I am willing to admit that I'd feel better and freer in a new suit than I do in this one, good as it is; and every spring and fall, as the seasons come along, I say to myself: 'Now this spring I am surely going to get a new suit,' and I think I see the way clear to it, and I am going to have the money."

"But then when the time comes, why, I brush the old suit up and I get it repaired and pressed, generally put in order, and really I think it will do."

"You see we have so many uses for money. There are things that we must have, things that maybe don't cost very much, but that you have to spend something for all the time as you go along. All these things, small as they may be, eat up the money, and if your means are moderate you find you don't have much margin—as a matter of fact next to no margin—and when the time comes when you want something that costs a lump sum, why, you haven't got it."

"And that's the way things look to me just at the present moment about the new suit I was going to get this spring. Nothing doing that way this spring I guess after all; but I think I'm sure to hit it this fall—I mean next fall. I think things'll clear up so that I can have a suit in the fall anyway."

"Meanwhile, I'm not worrying, not even disturbed. I'm blessed with health and strength and I'm not so old as I might be, and if I haven't got a very extensive wardrobe I think I must have a corner on hope. I see nothing but bright prospects; I have never had a doubt that some day I'll have all the clothes I want, and I wouldn't be surprised if I had even fancy waistcoats."

A DRIVE IN TIBET.

Surprise of Natives at Sight of Vehicle Drawn by Horse.

Before the departure of our guests I offered to take one of them for a short drive, writes F. M. Bedley in Blackwood's Magazine. The vehicle is a low seated trap just imported from India, but unfortunately no harness has arrived as yet; however, I have improvised some with rawhide and we start off down the stony road and across the bridge.

My guest and all the onlookers are vastly amused, the tears roll down their faces at the laughable idea of sitting in a chair and making a pony pull it along. There are no wheeled vehicles in Tibet, and these people had only seen the rough ekkas, which were used for transport during the expedition in 1904. Their surprise at the motor car imported by my predecessor had subsided, though they were always glad to surround and stare at it.

For sheer entertainment, however, let them gaze on the white man's new invention going down the road. After a spin of half a mile we return, but as we are crossing the narrow bridge, innocent of parapets, it occurs to me that the pony is further off than he should be.

I am puzzling over this phenomenon when suddenly the shafts slip clear of the harness, the trap tilts back and we are lying on it with our heads hanging over the rushing water and our feet pointing to the skies.

Meanwhile the pony, who "never in this wise had treated been before," tears the reins out of my hands and gallops home. The Tibetan groom with great presence of mind closes the hood of the trap so that we cannot see the awful doom that awaits us if we stir, though the danger is no further off on that account.

With some difficulty we are rescued, my Tibetan friend in a terrified condition, and I have never been able to persuade him to come for a drive again, even behind the best Cawnpore harness.

COMING TO CANADA.

Respectable German Girls Want Husbands.

Helene, a sturdy German fraulein, writes the editor of the Berlin Tageblatt thus: "Since the German Government pays no attention whatever to the colossal surplus of young German girls, and as the high price of meat is making it increasingly difficult for respectable German girls to get married, the girls of our circle have unanimously decided to become British subjects and to emigrate to Canada in order that the aspirations of the Canadian bachelors may be gratified. We do not see why the young English women should snatch the best catches from under the very noses of us German girls. I see by the papers that there are 50,000 eligible bachelors in Canada without suitable feminine acquaintances."

Helene goes on to say that when German young womanhood has emigrated bodily and become British, the old country will see what a mistake it made in refusing the franchise to these once loyal and desirable subjects."

PURIFIED HIS BLOOD

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills
Healed Mr. Wilson's Sores

When the sewers of the body—bowels, kidneys and skin ducts—get clogged up, the blood quickly becomes impure and frequently sores break out over the body. The way to heal them, as Mr. Richard Wilson, who lives near London, Ont., found, is to purify the blood. He writes:

"For some time I had been in a low, depressed condition. My appetite left me and I soon began to suffer from indigestion. Quite a number of small sores and blotches formed all over my skin. I tried medicine for the blood and used many kinds of ointments, but without satisfactory results. What was wanted was a thorough cleansing of the blood, and I looked about in vain for some medicine that would accomplish this.

At last Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills were brought to my notice, and they are one of the most wonderful medicines I have ever known. My blood was purified in a very short time, sores healed up, my indigestion vanished. They always have a place in my home and are looked upon as the family remedy."

Consider the horse how he plows, or, for your greater profit, consider two horses and the difference between them. They stand at the end of a row of trees in an orchard, and the plowboy is resting and smoking on full pay. His excuse for this kind of work is one of the horses. Less than an hour before the team had been put to the plow, and this horse is breathless and covered with sweat. He looks as if another furrow would kill him. But, strangely enough, his mate, which is of about the same size and strength, shows no signs of distress. He is calm and collected, ready to rest and also ready to work. The plowboy explains between puffs. It seems that the panting and sweating horse is the victim of an unfortunate temperament. He is high strung and fretful. When he works he thrashes about and wears himself out with excitement. He is not lazy, but he is always worried. A large percentage of the energy with which he is endowed is wasted. The result is that he is exhausted after a very little labor. The other horse takes things as they come and frets not at all. He is at peace with the world as he stands there waiting for the next command, and when the command comes he will go ahead in the same temper. He could do twice the work of the fretful horse and not feel it half as much.

As it is with horses, so it is with men. When there is a fire-alarm attachment for every little task, ill temper, a waste of energy in nervous excitement, there is a tremendous spluttering, but no getting anywhere. The greatest work is to conquer the fretting. After that the real work of our lives will come easy. This is the moral preached by the horses, but possibly the plowboy is also an instructor who should not be overlooked. He belongs to a class that is rather common among the youth of the land. Much of his energy disappears in the smoke and in the strong epithets with which his conversation is adorned. While he is consigning the tired horse to all sorts of troubles it is evident that he is glad of an excuse for taking a vacation and charging it up to his employer. If his is the promise of efficiency in the rising generation perhaps there is an incidental use for horsewhips on farms that might be of great benefit to society. The serene and industrious horse is a rebuke both to his restless companion and to his loafing and conscienceless driver. Given a team like him and a man as good as the team and the difference in results would be as remarkable as if magic had intervened. It would be the difference between

Notes of Particular Interest to Women Folks

ATTRACTIVE RECIPES.

Currant Bread.—Ordinary bread dough sweetened a little and with a small extra amount of shortening and a cup of currants makes as good a loaf as one could ask for. If one cares to go to a little more work the following recipe is excellent: Whole wheat currant bread—Scald (do not boil) one and one-half cups sweet milk and one cup water. When tepid add one-half compressed yeast after soaking ten minutes in cool water, two tablespoons of sugar, and one of salt. Stir in enough whole wheat flour to make a stiff batter. Allow to raise—three hours is long enough if kept warm, over night if cool. When light add one egg, one tablespoonful of melted butter, one cup of cleaned and dried currants. Beat well, then add whole wheat flour to make a soft dough. Work well, mold into two loaves, place in greased pans, brush over with melted butter, let rise until light, and then bake in hot oven. When brown which should take about twenty minutes, cool the oven one-half and bake thirty minutes longer.

Raisin and Celery Salad.—Use two cups of celery, chopped; two oranges cut in small pieces, and one cup of raisins plumped, seeded, and halved. Add one-half cup of grated apple to one cup of mayonnaise and cover the mixture with this. Make the mayonnaise with lemon juice instead of vinegar and grate a little of the orange rind over the dressing.

Pistachio Ice Cream.—Blanch three ounces of pistachio nuts and chop them fine. If they seem dry cover them with one tablespoonful of sherry or a few drops of rose-water and let stand for some time. Scald one pint of cream, add one cupful of sugar, stir until it is dissolved, and cook until the cream looks blue and thin. Take from the fire, add one pint of raw cream, and cool. When cool add the nuts and flavor with one teaspoonful of vanilla, one teaspoonful of pistachio extract, and color a delicate green. Turn into the freezer and freeze.

CAKE.

Coffee Cake.—Two cups sugar, one cup butter, one cup raisins, one-half cup sour milk, one-half cup hot coffee, one small teaspoonful of soda, one-half teaspoonful of cinnamon, and one-half teaspoonful of nutmeg, two cups flour, cream sugar and butter together. Dissolve soda in the coffee and then pour into the milk; add to cream and sugar. After sifting flour three times, mix with the raisins and spices, add to the rest of the ingredients, and bake in a moderate oven from five minutes to one hour.

Chocolate Cake.—One cup milk, two squares chocolate. Put on and boil until it thickens. Set off and allow to cool. One cup sugar, one with tablespoonful of butter, and mixed with crushed berries. Serve with a mound of whipped cream. This makes an attractive dessert for luncheon or tea. Peaches make a nice filling also.

USEFUL HINTS.

Very pretty curtains for living rooms or dining rooms may be made of madras. It washes well and is durable.

When making a steamed or boiled pudding pleat in the cloth at the top to allow the pudding to swell.

When beating eggs, observe that there is no grease on the whisk, as it will prevent the eggs from frothing.

To remove odor from a knife used in peeling onions, run it through a raw potato.

Liquid soap has supplanted the cake kind in many homes, because it is tidier and more refreshing.

Take the pie out of the pan as soon as it is done to prevent the crust being soggy.

An egg that is shiny may be suspected; one that is rough on the surface generally is fresh.

Old bread may take a new form in breadcrumb cake. Soak the bread in buttermilk and use flour to thicken the batter.

Do not destroy any net from old curtains. Cut in squares of desired size and stitch together and they will make excellent washcloths.

Tough steak should be chopped and mixed with diced potatoes and then baked. Grated cheese over this dish improves the flavor.

Add a teaspoonful of sugar of lead to the water in which the silk hose is washed to prevent the delicate color fading.

In making a cake grease the tin with sweet lard rather than butter, and sift a little dry flour over it.

Wipe off screens with a duster each morning, and beat with a soft brush. The beating should be done lightly in order that the wire be not bulged.

Embroidered table linens should never be folded when put away, but rolled in a long roll with tissue paper rolled up with it. This will save a great amount of pressing.

Don't handle the dough any more than necessary when making biscuits, doughnuts or cookies. The more you handle it the tougher it will become.

If gilt frames are coated with copal varnish it will preserve them, and they can be washed with water without removing the lustre from the gilt.

To take axle grease out of goods rub the spot with lard. Rub the goods in the hand as if washing. Let stay in three hours, and then wash out in cold water, using plenty of soap.

In making a shoe bag or laundry bag that is to hang at against the door, use brass rings instead of

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

INTERNATIONAL LESSON, MAY 21.

Song of the Vineyard (Temperance Lesson), Isa. 5:1-12. Golden Text, Isa. 5:22.

Verse I. My wellbeloved . . . my beloved — The difference in the words is merely one of rhythm. Isaiah is about to declare to the people of his time that their country is in danger from the just judgments of Jehovah. But he conceals his purpose by telling this story that all can understand. Who the beloved friend was, therefore, would hardly be asked.

A very fruitful hill—Literally, “a horn, the son of fatness,” a word for “hill” peculiar to Isaiah. From Jerusalem it was possible to see many a bright promontory given up to vineyard cultivation.

2. Dug . . . gathered . . . planted—The work of cultivation was as perfect as the situation. The choicest grapes to be found were introduced. In addition, a watch tower for the caretakers added dignity and protection to the vineyard. The wine vat would be hewed out of the solid rock, forming a receptacle for the juice from the press.

He looked . . . grapes — The confident expectation of a vinedresser, who had expended such pains on his property, would be that a fair return should come for his outlay. Instead he gets grapes that are only so in appearance.

3. And now—Marking an advance in the unfolding of the story. The prophet fittingly seeks a verdict from the men he addresses, as to what a husbandman ought to do in such a case. And with this appeal Jehovah himself enters the field, and the assemblage can be no longer in doubt as to the drift of the parable.

4. What could have been done more?—This reminds one of the sad wail of Jehovah in Isa. 1:2, “I have nourished and brought up children, and they have rebelled against me.” The case of the Owner of this vineyard of human beings, the people of Judah, is a strong and unanswerable one. He justly looked for the fruits of righteous character, but instead was rewarded with only the semblance of grapes, the poison of hypocrisy.

5. I will tell you what I will do—There is nothing unreasonable in his decision. The prophet's hearers have already practically consented to the justice of such a judgment.

The hedge—Jehovah had provided Israel with every possible restraint and privilege. This is represented by the fact that this vineyard had not only a hedge of thorns but also a wall of stone. But now all protections are to be trodden down, and the nation is to be left to the mercy of the invaders.

6. I will also command the clouds—With this the veil, if any still remained, was entirely removed. For none but Jehovah can withhold the rain.

7. For—Introducing the prophet's two-fold application of the parable: (1) The vineyard represents the people of Israel, and especially Judah, the plant of his delight; (2) The grapes he expected were justice and

Given a team like him and a man as good as the team and the difference in results would be as remarkable as if magic had intervened. It would be the difference between success and failure.

The London Guildhall meeting, addressed by Messrs. Asquith and Balfour, premier and ex-premier, and attended by representative Englishmen of all classes, was inspiring and significant. Permanent Anglo-American peace through arbitration is no longer a dream. Public sentiment throughout the British and American empires has made it a reality. But—the most ideal treaty of arbitration between Britain and America will not, as Mr. Balfour warned the meeting, reduce military-naval budgets or limit armaments. The treaty is desired and desirable for its "moral effect" on continental Europe. It is, as Mr. Asquith said, certain that "other things will follow" such a treaty—things which may and shall spell economy, relief of tax-payers, limitation of armaments by international agreement.

It is no secret that the most essential of these things is a good understanding between England and Germany. For Anglo-German distrust, Anglo-German rivalry in armaments and war preparations, and supposed irrepressible conflicts of interest between England and Germany constitute the most serious menace to peace and the most formidable obstacle in the way of comprehensive arbitration and lessening of war waste. It was announced at the Guildhall meeting that cheering news might be expected from Berlin. This is encouraging. It shows that the effect of the Anglo-American proposals is already emerging, that German statesmen have been impressed and are taking notice, and that the jingoes' superficial batter is losing its potency with "practical" men who see beyond their noses. Let the negotiations proceed. Germany is alert and interested. She will be drawn into the great movement, and the rest of western Europe with her.

THE NEED OF MEN.

More men are needed in the world to-day than ever before, because there is more to do—more different things to make, more actual people to support. Fifteen years ago the bicycle-makers would have been frightened into bankruptcy if you had told them that in 1910 their trade would have almost disappeared. But what do we see now? The coming of automobiles has given work to all the bicycle men and thousands more. And it is so in other businesses and professions. The point to remember is that, while the form of work changes, the work in every field remains, and even increases. The real claims are not all taken up. Alexander the Great was only a fool when he wept because there were no more world to conquer.

and bake in a moderate oven from five minutes to one hour.

Chocolate Cake.—One cup milk, two squares chocolate. Put on and boil until it thickens. Set off and allow to cool. One cup sugar, one tablespoonful butter, creamed, add chocolate and milk, pinch of salt, one level teaspoonful baking soda, one-half cupful boiling water, flour to make as stiff as any deep cake.

Coffee Icing.—One and one-half cups confectionery sugar, one teaspoonful of vanilla, piece of butter size of egg, four teaspoonsfuls cocoa, three tablespoonsfuls of strong boiling hot coffee (hot coffee heats up frosting). Cream all together.

Ice Cream Cake.—One cupful sugar, one-half cupful butter, one-half cupful milk, one and one-half cupfuls flour, one and one-half teaspoonfuls baking powder, whites of three eggs, two teaspoonsfuls vanilla. Icing—One-half cupful pulverized sugar and more, one and one-half teaspoonsfuls vanilla.

Cocoa Cake.—One-third cup butter, one-half cup water, one and one-half cup flour; beat all together; five teaspoonsfuls of cocoa, sift with flour five times separately two teaspoonsfuls of baking powder; bake in moderate oven. The more you beat the cake the better it is.

FRUIT BEVERAGE.

Raisin Wine.—Chop fine two pounds of seeded raisins, add one lemon, a pound of white sugar, and about two gallons of boiling water. Pour into a stone jar and stir daily for six or eight days. Strain, bottle, and put in a cool place for ten days or so, when the wine will be ready for use.

Fruit Punch.—One and one-half dozen lemons, one dozen oranges, juice from one quart canned raspberries, eight cups granulated sugar, ten quarts of water, one dozen bananas. Press the juice from lemons and oranges. Add the sugar and berry juice. Let stand until ready to use, then add the water and bananas, which must be sliced. A few strawberries may be added, or cherries if one so desires.

STRAWBERRIES.

Strawberry Service.—Rub one cupful of sugar and half a cupful of butter to a cream. Add the beaten white of one egg and one cupful of strawberries thoroughly washed.

Rice and Strawberries.—Pour two cups of boiling water on one cup of well washed rice, add one teaspoon salt, cook in double boiler thirty minutes. Add a pint or more of milk and a heaping tablespoonful of butter, boil until perfectly tender and not too dry. Pour into a dish and let stand until cold. Dressing: One cup powdered sugar, one tablespoonful butter, beat to a cream; one cup fresh ripe strawberries and the well beaten white of an egg added last. In serving it put into each sauce some rice and on the rice place a liberal portion of the dressing.

Individual Strawberry Shortcake.—Make dough of one pint of flour, two teaspoonsfuls of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonsfuls of sugar, four tablespoonsfuls of butter. Mix and sift, add butter and milk enough to make a dough that will roll easily; roll and cut with large cutter and bake in tart or gem tins. This will make twelve cakes. Filling for shells: One quart of berries, one cupful of powdered sugar creamed

Let stay in three hours, and then wash out in cold water, using plenty of soap.

In making a shoe bag or laundry bag that is to hang at against the door, use brass rings instead of loops for slipping over the nails. They will not pull out as the loops may.

A saucer of baked beans can be warmed up with catsup in a pan, and a spoonful on toasted crackers serves nicely for the noonday luncheon.

Clear soup should be strained without forcing through a folded towel, laid on a colander; otherwise particles of egg used in clearing will be forced through and spoil the soup.

When making lemonade one of the lemons may be peeled and run through a meat chopper with a small piece of the peel. This will give the lemonade a delightful flavor.

CLERGYMAN A DETECTIVE.

Telltale Nail Brought Woman to the Scaffold.

Dr. John Donne, the famous English divine and poet, who lived in the reign of James I., was a veritable Sherlock Holmes, says London Tit-Bits. One of his famous exploits is as follows: He was walking in the churchyard while a grave was being dug, when the sexton cast up a mouldering skull. The doctor idly took it up and, in handling it, found a headless nail driven into it.

This he managed to take out and conceal in his handkerchief. It was evident to him that murder had been done. He questioned the sexton and he learned that the skull was probably that of a certain man who was the proprietor of a brandy shop and was a drunkard, being found dead in bed one morning after a night in which he had drunk two quarts of brandy.

"Had he a wife?" asked the doctor. "Yes." "What character does she bear?" "She bore a very good character, only the neighbors gossiped because she married the day after her husband's funeral. She still lives here." The doctor soon called on the woman.

He asked for and received the particulars of the death of her husband. Suddenly opening his handkerchief he showed her the telltale nail, asking in a loud voice, "Madame, do you know this nail?" The woman was so surprised that she confessed, was tried and executed.

WHAT IS ELECTRICITY?

Many persons, young and old, often wonder how the modern electric cars, trains and locomotives are operated and what electricity is. No one knows what electricity is. We know some of the things that it will do; we have, to a certain extent, learned how to control it, and, for want of a better name, we call it a fluid. We have discovered, too, that it is one of the most important forces, if not the most important force, of which we have any knowledge. We are almost as ignorant of many other great forces of Nature, as, for example, the attraction of gravitation. For the present we must be content to observe such forces in action, and to devise the best methods to control them.

In this knowledge mankind has progressed wonderfully within a few years.

7. For—Introducing the prophet's two-fold application of the parable: (1) The vineyard represents the people of Israel, and especially Judah, the plant of his delight; (2) The grapes he expected were justice and righteousness, and the wild grapes he found were oppression of the poor, and the cry of the oppressed. The words in the Hebrew at this point are wonderful in their studied correspondence of sounds, the effect being to deepen the impression, that the natural result of so much care of his people, on the part of Jehovah, has been cruelly perverted.

8. Woe—An indictment of the landed proprietors, who, by joining house to house, and seizing upon every nook and corner of real estate, crowd out the poor and deprive them of residential privileges. We have seen, in the case of Na-both, how tenaciously every land-owner clung to his holdings, since the rights of citizenship were measured mostly by a man's possession of so much soil, and, once deprived of it, he was in danger of becoming a mere slave. Such evictions of the smaller owners of property were common in this age, and called forth the bitter denunciations of other prophets.

9. In mine ears—Jehovah takes the prophet into his confidence, and the prophet, in turn, makes the startling announcement that all these evils are known to Jehovah, and that he will not suffer them to go unrequited. When they are secure in their houses great and fair, feasting no doubt on the spoils of their avarice, then shall come upon them the curse described in the following verse.

10. One bath—About eight gallons (of wine). This barrenness of the land, "Jehovah's remedy for land-grabbing," is still more pointedly portrayed in the profitlessness of planting grain; for one ephah shall be the sole return from the planting of ten ephahs (a homer being ten or twelve bushels, or ten times as much as an ephah).

11. Rise up early in the morning—To drink in the morning was reckoned by the Romans and Jews a shameful practice. Sensuality, in the mind of the prophet, goes along with avarice. The latter, after all, is simply self-gratification in another form, and the two often go hand in hand.

12. The harp, etc.—Mirth and music filled their feasts, but it was like a din in their ears that drowned out the voice of Jehovah, and rendered them insensible to the operation of his hands by which he was plainly about to execute a terrible judgment upon them.

ROMANTIC.

"If you don't marry me," he cried desperately, "I shall kill myself!"

"And write a note telling all about it?" queried she.

"Yes."

"And hold my photograph in your other hand?"

"I had thought about it."

"Well, just wait a minute," she said, "and I'll borrow pa's pistol for you. My! Won't it be romantic!"

Tom—"Did Maud tell you the truth when you asked her her age?" Dick—"Yes." Tom—"What did she say?" Dick—"She said it was none of my business."

THE ESCAPE

It was the Saturday morning before a Bank Holiday, and the West Kensington Branch of the London, International, and Metropolitan Bank was exceedingly busy. Clerks from business houses were calling for the week's wages, happy-looking holiday makers were cashing cheques utterly regardless of the balances left to their credit, shopkeepers were paying in their takings, and the inevitable maiden ladies, who always worry bank officials on the busiest morning of the week, were of course in evidence.

Mr. Murgatroyd, the branch manager, walked slowly across the office, stopping here and there to exchange a word with some important client, till he came to the head cashier. He paused for half a moment at the counter and said casually: "Ah, Mr. Gray, when the rush is over I should be glad of two words with you in my office."

The head cashier nodded hastily and went on with his work. But as he counted out the coins he seemed to fumble nervously as if they stuck to his fingers. Every now and then he glanced anxiously over his shoulder to see if the manager were watching him. Whenever the bank door swung open he looked uneasily at the newcomer. At last the rush was over, and, with dubious steps, he went towards the manager's office.

"Ah, Mr. Gray," said the manager, looking up, "do you mind closing the door?"

The cashier closed the door and waited—the picture of nervous anxiety.

"I think that Simpson and Co. should be written to about their over-draft. I don't think that the securities we hold of their justify it. What do you think, Mr. Gray?"

"I quite agree with you, sir," said the cashier, in tones of intense relief. "I will write them today."

The manager looked at him curiously. "By the way, Gray," he said, "I looked through the reserve cash this morning."

The cashier sank down into a chair.

"There is a shortage of five hundred pounds. Can you explain it?"

Gray murmured something unintelligible.

"Was it horse-racing or bucket-shops?"

"Mining shares," muttered the cashier.

The manager rose from his chair and walked uneasily up and down the office.

"I needn't tell you how serious this is, Gray."

"I know, sir. I've thought about nothing else sleeping and waking for the past fortnight."

"Can you replace the money at once. If so, and if you will instantly resign your position, I will do my best to induce the directors not to take proceedings."

"I wish to heaven I could. I might lay my hands on a hundred pounds, but I can no more raise a hundred than I can a million."

to run across and say good-bye to him at Havre. You will then have a chance to get clear away, and in a new country you may start a fresh career."

"Murgatroyd," said the cashier, rising to his feet, "I know that you are running a risk for my sake. You're the best hearted fellow I ever met. If I am caught I tell you that I'll rather go to penal servitude for twenty years than betray the fact that you have helped me now."

"Well, you had better be looking at the reserve cash. Some of the others know that I checked it this morning. It will be understood that you yielded to temptation and bolted with it the last thing. Of course I shall check it again instantly when I find that you don't turn up on Tuesday. Now go out and grumble to the other fellows that I've been hauling you over the coals because of that Simpson and Co.'s over-draft."

The cashier gripped the manager's hand. "You're a true friend, Murgatroyd, and the best fellow I ever knew."

"Don't praise me," said Murgatroyd. "I know that I am betraying the bank's interests. That's bad enough to bear. Oh, Gray, why didn't you think before getting into this hideous bother? Now good luck to you abroad, and if ever you can pay the money back to the bank I rely on you to do so."

"I will if ever I am able. I promise you that," replied the cashier.

On Tuesday morning there was a slight sensation at the bank when it was found that the head cashier did not appear or send a note of explanation.

"Go round to his lodgings, at once," said Mr. Murgatroyd to one of the juniors, "and see what's the matter. Remind him of the rule that I expect a letter of explanation or a doctor's certificate as an excuse for absence without leave."

The junior soon came back with the news that Mr. Gray had left his lodgings hurriedly on Saturday afternoon and had not returned since.

The manager looked a little grave and went instantly to the safe where the reserve of cash was kept.

In ten minutes he came back to the general office. "I regret to say that there is a serious shortage in the reserve cash. It must have occurred since early on Saturday morning, for I checked it then myself. This is a very grave business. I must telephone at once to the head office and to Scotland Yard."

Soon a couple of detectives arrived at the bank. The manager himself explained the details to them. One of them went off instantly to wire a description of the missing man to the ports, and the other went to search his lodgings and see if he could pick up any information there. He returned quickly and confided to the manager that he had found a fragment of a steamship sailing's bill in the missing man's desk, and had got a cabinet portrait of him from his landlady. "The bill's torn, but I can make out quite enough from it. It's a list of sailings to the States. If we don't get him at Liverpool, it's a certainty we nab him at Queenstown or New York."

"I know, sir. I've thought about nothing else sleeping and waking for the past fortnight."

"Can you replace the money at once. If so, and if you will instantly resign your position, I will do my best to induce the directors not to take proceedings."

"I wish to heaven I could. I might lay my hands on a hundred pounds, but I can no more raise a hundred than I can a million."

THE FARM

Useful Hints for the Tiller of the Soil

MAKE SOIL CROP FIT.

There is no use of trying to achieve success with a soil not fitted to the crop. We must make a more intelligent study of the selection of crops that are better adapted to our soils.

One of the first things to learn is to find out which crops are best adapted to our soils and grow them on our farms. We need to study the requirements of the various crops that we grow in our crop rotations so that each crop may be grown under the most favorable conditions.

The average farmer has reached a point where stable manure will not supply the adequate amount of plant food to produce a maximum yield of grain and other crops and the only sensible thing to do is to supply the difficult elements.

The generality of soils on our stock and dairy farms are lacking in mineral fertility, especially phosphorous, and it is clearly to our advantage to supply this one element to our soils if we fit them to the needs of our crops.

On soils possessing an abundance of humus and nitrogen, we may purchase phosphoric rock and mix it with stable manure, but on soils lacking in humus and obtained by using acid phosphate, which is readily available for the growing crops.

With clover and manure ploughed under to liberate potash, and the addition of purchased phosphoric acid the fertility problem on the average stock farm where clover and other legumes are grown, will be solved. On many types of soil potash will be needed, but the average stock-farm has plenty of potash locked up in its soil to produce good crops for many years.

On many farms where the legumes ceases to thrive lime is needed to bring the soil to a condition favorable for the growth of these soil-improving crops. It corrects soil acidity, thus stimulating the action of the bacteria which help to make the plant food available and gather placed on my shoulder at any moment, and I thought that if the money were paid the bank might arrange for the withdrawal of the warrant. Could you take the money and arrange through some one of your agents that the bank should be approached?"

Murgatroyd smiled. "My dear fellow, I don't recommend you to take any steps in the matter. Between ourselves your shortage was not five hundred but five thousand pounds."

"I had already arranged to bolt myself when I discovered your little deficiency, and thought it best for all parties that you should go in my place. I placed my own arrangements for evasion at your disposal. I thought that as the younger man you could adapt yourself nitrogen from the atmosphere. It changes dormant plant food into active plant food, by carbonating the soil water and making it a more powerful solvent. It improves the physical condition of the soil by making soils lighter and the loose soils more compact. On some soils it is needed as a plant food for such crops as clover and alfalfa. There is no question but what we should use lime on our soils to make them congenial to the legumes. The great question seems to be how much we can profitably use. A moderate amount, say one ton to the acre every four or six years, is better than heavy applications less frequently.

HANDLING MANURE.

If manure is left in piles by the barn it will soon begin to heat, even in winter, especially if it contains any large portion of horse manure is decomposed and the element of most value, the nitrogen, is lost in the form of gas. In the spring and early summer if manure is lying where rain can fall on it, much of the fertility is leached out and carried away. If the manure is spread on the field directly from the barn, heating is prevented until the manure is covered up in the soil. Then any elements that are liberated by decomposition are taken up by the soil and saved. When manure is spread out on the field it dries out; and as the larger part of the manure is in insoluble form, even if it does rain on the fields, very little fertility is washed out because it is not soluble. It does not become soluble until covered up in the ground where it is kept moist and where decomposition can take place. Then the leaching leaves the fertility in the soil where it is used. Considering these facts and the fact that manure is handled fewer times when hauled direct from the barns to the fields, it makes it quite evident that from the standpoint of economy this is the practical way to handle manure.

better to life abroad. You have justified my good opinion of you.

"Here you are a successful planter. Now I have always felt, even when contemplating foreign travel, that my proper sphere was the City. Now, thanks largely to you and the capital your flight enabled me to secure, I am a power in the City. Now, Gray, instead of proposing fatuous schemes for wasting money on ungrateful bank directors, let me hear all about your plantation. It may be adapted to float as a company, and with our joint financial experience, we could draw up amazing balance sheets for past years. Come, give me the details, old man, you may rely on me doing my very best for my old colleague and substitute."—Pearson's Weekly.

once. If so, and if you will instantly resign your position, I will do my best to induce the directors not to take proceedings."

"I wish to heaven I could. I might lay my hands on a hundred pounds, but I can no more raise five hundred than I can a million."

"Then I've no alternative," said the manager, in pained tones. "Good Heavens, Gray, why hadn't you some consideration for me? Here I am forced to take action against a man I've worked with and liked for years—forced to send him to penal servitude. Do you think it is pleasant for me?"

"Look here, Murgatroyd, give me a chance. Let me get away from here safely to-day, and I promise you that there will be no one to prosecute on Tuesday. My life's been a horror this last fortnight, and it would be a relief to make an end of things."

Mr. Murgatroyd shook his head decidedly. "I can't have your life on my conscience, Gray. It would be an everlasting horror. It would be worse to think about even than sending you to penal servitude."

"Well, well, get it over then. Send for the police, but for Heaven's sake, Murgatroyd, get me out the back way. Everybody round here banks with us, and I can't bear the ordeal of being taken out in custody before them."

Murgatroyd walked towards the telephone, and then paused as if he could not make up his mind. Then he turned sharply round, and said: "Gray, if I give you a chance you won't betray me?"

The cashier looked up at him in a puzzled way.

"Pull yourself together, man. Think what you are doing. On your honor, if I overlook this matter to-day and only discover it on Tuesday morning, will you promise not to give me away? You will have a chance then to get out of the country."

The cashier shook his head in a hopeless way. "They're sure to get me," he murmured, "they always do. But I thank you, Murgatroyd, and I promise that I will never give you away. I'll try to get away to the States or Canada, and make a fresh start."

The manager shrugged his shoulders. "That's a mad idea, Gray. They are sure to watch the American steamers. Why, the detective almost automatically go to the Liverpool landing stage when a bank clerk is missing."

"But what am I to do?"

"I feel that I am betraying the bank," said the manager uneasily, "but I can't bear the idea of an old friend going to penal servitude. Here, Gray, you always bragged that you could speak French like a Frenchman."

"My mother was a Frenchwoman," replied the cashier. "Thank goodness, she's dead and will never know about this."

"Draw all the money you have to your credit here," said Murgatroyd. "On your way to your lodgings call at a steamship agency and make inquiries about sailings to the States. They'll give you a list of steamers. Leave a bit of that list in your desk, or somewhere about the place. Then take the first train to Southampton, and get across to Havre by steamer. You'll be there by Sunday morning. Then dress yourself a trifle more in French style, and as a Frenchman, under a French name, book a passage on the Booth liner for South America that calls at Havre on Tuesday. I know one is due that day, for a friend of mine is coming from Liverpool on it, and asked me

It's a list of sailings to the States. If we don't get him at Liverpool, it's a certainty we nab him at Queenstown or New York."

"I need not urge you to be active and vigilant," said the manager. "The directors always treat the Detective Force well if they think they have been well served. But I should never have thought that Gray would have done this."

"Bless you, sir," said the detective, "it's always the ones you don't expect who do these things. If you had expected it you'd never have given him the chance. This young fellow's number's up anyhow."

Still, in spite of the detective's confidence, the absconding cashier was not arrested. One or two innocent people were detained at Liverpool. A detective made a hurried journey to Queenstown to examine a suspect. Once even the manager was startled by a newspaper placard, "Absconding Cashier arrested," but although the person arrested proved to be a thief, he had merely robbed a gas company and not a bank. So gradually the hue and cry died down, and soon the only people who talked of Gray's absconding were the impudent juniors in the office who wildly speculated on the immense spree the former cashier must be enjoying somewhere.

Five years later Mr. Murgatroyd was no longer in the bank's employment but a City potentate, landed at Para. He had come out on behalf of a large syndicate he was interested in, to investigate some half-dozen rubber properties which were esteemed ripe for promotion.

He was at his hotel one night when a card was brought to him.

"Marchand," murmured Murgatroyd to himself, "I don't know the man. I suppose that he's some wild-cat scheme to work off on me."

Then he said to the waiter: "Well, show the gentleman up here."

A minute later a sun-burnt man walked into the room and closed the door carefully behind him.

"Murgatroyd," he said.

The financier started. "Why, it's Gray. How are you going on, old fellow?"

"Thanks to you, Murgatroyd, I'm doing well. I've a coffee plantation that's paying, and as luck would have it, some two years since I planted a lot of rubber trees. Soon I shall be a wealthy man."

"Delighted to hear it, delighted. I knew that you would do well if you once got the chance."

"But there's one thing I wanted to see you about. You know that five hundred pounds I was short of?"

"Yes. That caused me a lot of trouble, Gray. In fact, I gave up my position in the bank on that account. The directors made a practice of not promoting any branch manager whose subordinates had defrauded the bank. They held the manager responsible. It's hard, of course."

"And you suffered that for me?"

"Don't you worry, old fellow. I went into the City when I resigned, and now I'm making twice the income of the bank's general manager."

"I'm so glad, but this is what I wanted to consult you about. I promised you that I would send back that five hundred pounds. I could spare it easily now with interest, but naturally I don't want to give away my place of refuge. I hate feeling as if a hand might be

CHILDREN AND CHILDISHNESS

Between Two Clashing Statements One Choice Morsel of Truth

"When I was a child I spoke, acted, and thought as a child, but when I became a man I put away childish things."—Saint Paul.

"Verily I say unto you, except ye be changed, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven. Little children, of such is the kingdom of heaven."—Jesus.

I once had a silly book, compiled by some rabid bibliophiliac, and entitled "The Contradictions of the Bible," in which were arranged in parallel columns those texts which seemed to contradict each other, each sentence being set opposite its negative. The whole work was based upon the error that a contradiction is equivalent to a lie. The truth, however, is quite the contrary. Contradictions are the favorite method of wise teachers; they abound in Socrates and in Bacon.

In the two texts above, the apostle indicates that when one grows up he should cease to be like a child; while the master declares that except we retain and become like a child we are lost. And the confusion of this is but seeming, for it may be loosed and made into common sense by two words that are in our mouths every day—to wit: the words childlike and childish.

To be childlike, says Jesus, is to be great. I have seen some great men in my time, and have tried to learn something of their secret; and I have never known one who was not simple, approachable, and

WITH A CHILD HEART.

Great speech is always plain, lucid, and direct. Great art is least ornate. Great emotions are downright. Whereas pettiness of all kinds is sophisticated, smart, adorned, perfumed, and jeweled, or wants to be.

Childishness is another matter.

About nine-tenths of what we call sin is mere childishness, undeveloped morality, arrested ethical growth, a persistent child longing for gingerbread and gewgaws, an inability to appreciate the future, and a readiness to sacrifice the future always for the present.

Note some of the childish things which we are to put away. First of all is crying, the most characteristic of all child faults. Analyzed carefully, crying is found to consist in this: the gaining of what we desire by the use of our disagreeableness. It is the weapon of weakness. In adults we call it complaining, or pouting, or sulking. How many a woman gets her way by "the tyranny of tears"! And how many a man rules his house by sheer surliness! Such are but grown up "bawl babies." It is almost worse than wickedness; it is meanness, and utterly despicable.

Pardonable in a child of 6, it is unpardonable in a big, bearded hulk of 46.

Another trait of childishness is the desire to "show off." Vanity, and love of notice, and the hunger for admiration is cunning enough in little Mabel in short dresses and bear cubs, out when Mabel becomes Mrs. Q. K. Philander Jones, age 35, and is president of the Ladies' Aid, and the mother of four children, and the wife of the leading grocer, it becomes her mightily to "put away childish things," and especially the desire to preen and prance, and occupy the spotlight. Modesty and a modicum of humility ought to come with maturity.

A child, too, is naturally egotistic in his instincts. Every child seems to be a born pedestrian. I have had children at my own table, and I know that each seemed to believe, that he alone was predestined from the foundation of the world to have the largest piece of pie and the choicest portion of chicken. When we grow up this egocentric trait also is to be put away. A man ought to learn, with years, that "there are others."

AS HIS INBORN CREED.

But that element of the child view which, if retained, works most havoc in us is, as I have hinted, the lack of power to visualize and realize the future. When a baby wants a thing he wants it now. The one thing he cannot do with grace is to wait. The present, the actual, hems him in and dominates him. With years ought to come that strongest increment of spiritual power, the ability to see the unseen; that is, to see how our acts will affect others, how the future. The greater a man is, and the manlier, the more he weighs these invisible motives and is governed by them.

For what is all defiling greed, and theft, and treachery, and sensuality, and spite, and fraud but a reaching forth of sightless and infantile desire, ignorant and heedless of the unseen thunder and lightning of the moral world? And what are heroes but they who in one form or another, in quiet domestic sacrifice, or in business integrity, or in patriotism, or in religious devotion, have "endured the cross and despised the present shame for the joy that was set before them"?

Children are sweet, almost divine, even, in their innocent little shortcomings; but it is because they are children. The wisdom concealed in the two contradicting texts given above consists in the truth that there is, in grown persons, a vast difference between childlikeness and childishness.

Mat Ott's newest musical reviews which comes to the Brisco Opera House on next Monday and Tuesday nights, has scored a hit and capacity audiences wherever it has appeared. The cast and the chorus were selected with a view to making these productions continuously entertaining in a kaleidoscopic manner and the musical parts have been cleverly constructed by the composer of many successes, Mathew Ott. The cast includes Alice Barton, Ollie Kirchman, Bell Mallette, Geo. Peters, Bert La Mont, Sidney Craven, Howard Mack and Geo. F. Allen. It is seldom that in musical comedy the individual members have the chance to do solo work as in "College Girls" and a "Prince for a day" and is without a doubt two of the greatest singing organizations of the year. The Shows are staged and costumed elaborately and the music is rendered with good effect with an augmented orchestra. Seats on sale Monday morning.

Opera House, Saturday Evening.

"At Cripple Creek," melodramatic as the name implies, does not deal with the usual run of blood and thunder, which is usual with plays of this nature. A well woven story, with plenty of pathos and comedy combined, an excellent company of players and a fine production with as handsome scenic and electrical effects as could be wished for all combined to make "At Cripple Creek" one of the best productions seen in this city. The company, which is under the direction of E. J. Carpenter, will appear at the Opera House, on Saturday evening, May 20th.

TWENTY SIX-FOOTERS

A Startling Example of How Oats Create Height

Archdeacon Sinclair, in advising boys to eat much oatmeal, said this: "Among my brothers and my father's brothers and sisters there were 20 six-footers, all brought up on oatmeal."

Oats contain more body-building food, more brain-building food, more nerve-building food than any other grain that grows. No other item in all human diet compares in importance with oats. Nothing else creates so much energy.

But thousands of people buy this food carelessly. They accept oatmeal made from oats as they run—the plump and the small, the rich and the worthless.

Quaker Oats is made from the cream of the oats, selected by 62 siftings. Only ten pounds in a bushel are good enough for use in this food. The result is a richness and flavor that all enjoy, and the maximum value as food."

Yet Quaker Oats, despite its quality, costs but one-half cent per dish. Does it pay to take something inferior?

the effect, while the Japanese gate on the platform gives admirably the effect of an oriental garden. The soft sounds from many tinklers is also truly Japanese. Last evening a large and delighted audience listened to one of the best concerts ever presented in Napanee. Every number was excellent, but special mention must be made of the graceful Japanese dance and the chorus given by charming Japanese maidens. During the afternoon dainty refreshments were served by attentive kimona-clad ladies from prettily decorated tete-a-tete tables. A great many of those present yesterday afternoon and evening expressed their desire to attend the concert this evening and all who were unable to attend will miss a great treat if they fail to see the prettily decorated hall and enjoy a dainty supper and excellent programme this afternoon and evening.

Don't forget the name "Prism Brand Floor Enamel." Used once on your kitchen floor you will use nothing else. Easily cleaned, dries quickly, and has a varnish gloss. The Medical Hall—Fred L. Hooper, sole agent for Napanee.

A fatal accident was narrowly averted at Belleville station on Tuesday. Mrs. A. Mongo, a member of the Mohawk band, was at the station intending to take the eastbound train for Shannondale. She boarded the westbound train, and as it was pulling out she discovered her mistake and jumped, falling between the train and the platform. Her right leg was broken and other injuries were sustained.
